Disabled failed by savage cuts

- » Bedroom tax attacks those who need room for carer or equipment
- » Mobility benefit cuts leave people stranded at home with no help
- » Hated fit-to-work drive pushes long-term sick into jobs they can't do

Coalition treatment is an attack on their human rights

BY JAMES LYONS Deputy Political Editor

TORIES are violating disabled people's human rights with hated policies such as the Bedroom Tax, a damning report warns today.

The Coalition's benefit cuts were also blasted for leaving people stranded at home with not enough to live on.

Baroness Jane Campbell described the Just Fair campaign's report as a "major wake-up call".

The independent peer, from the All-Party Parliamentary Disability Group, said the UK was once an "international leader in protecting disabled people's rights". But she added: "The UK risks sleepwalking towards the status of a systemic violator of these rights."

Almost two-thirds of people hit by the Bedroom Tax are disabled. It slashes benefits for people in social housing classed as having a spare room.

But research found it often failed to take into account extra rooms needed for carers or specialist equipment.

The report said Personal Independence Payment, which is replacing Disability Living Allowance and is supposed to help people get out and about, will leave many with not enough cash. A lack of social care funding also made it harder to get help at home.

And the report condemned the Government's fit-to-work drive, which has forced the long-term sick into jobs they are incapable of doing.

Prof Aoife Nolan, trustee of Just Fair, said: "Government policies are now compromising disabled people's enjoyment of their human rights."

Tory Minister for Disabled People Mike Penning said: "It is simply not true we are breaching our legal obligations."

He added: "We spend around £50 billion a year on disabled people and their services and our reforms will make sure the billions spent give more targeted support."

Militants kill 29 in Kenya

AT least 29 people died in two attacks by heavily armed gunmen on Kenya's coast.

Somali militant Islamist group al-Shabab said it was behind raids on a trading centre in Hindi village and a police station in Gamba.

Witnesses said about a dozen men opened fire in Hindi, setting fire to homes and government buildings.

Among the dead was a teenage boy.

A sign believed to have been left by the attackers said it was in revenge for Kenya's anti-terror operations in Somalia.

Two convicts flee from jail

TWO crooks have escaped from an open prison.

Philip Stephenson, 33, and Gareth Robinson, 24, fled HMP Kirkham in Lancashire together on Saturday. They are believed to have got into a silver VW Golf heading for their home town of Oldham.

Stephenson was in jail for firearms offences and Robinson for burglary.

Greater Manchester Police warned: "They are not to be approached by the public. If anyone is found to be assisting or harbouring these wanted men, they too will face being arrested."

Tories' bid to crush strikes

CABINET Minister Francis Maude yesterday threatened unions with new curbs on strikes ahead of a mass walkout on Thursday.

More than a million public sector staff will take action over pay and spending cuts.

Tory Mr Maude wants a minimum turnout for strike ballots and to force unions into more consultations.

He said: "These strikes are based on ballots either with extremely low turnouts... or with no recent ballot at all."

Mick Cash, of the RMT rail workers' union, said the plans "will meet the fiercest possible resistance".

Trojan Horse school 'set up to fail'

THE head of a Birmingham school caught up in the Trojan Horse allegations claims it has been "set up to fail" by education officials.

Jahangir Akbar, acting principal of Oldknow Academy, said its governors have refused to resign after they were invited to do so by the Education Funding Agency on Friday - the same day the school submitted its improvement plan to Schools Minister Lord Nash. He said: "We've been expected to change the academy in a few weeks - we've been set up to fail."

The Department for Education said it will consider the plan and "respond in due course". Oldknow, in Small Heath, was among 21 schools probed by Ofsted over claims that hardline Islam was taking root in classrooms.
