

'Get Mad About Cancer'

Above: Denine Rogers, a registered dietitian and nutritionist, spoke Saturday during the "Get Mad About Cancer" event, discussed information dealing with breast cancer. She said that 90-95 percent of breast cancer stems from environmental factors. Hope for the Journey and UGA Extension hosted the event at the Ag Center. Other speakers included physical therapist Cassie Wright and wellness transformation coach Tracee Randell. Several vendors were present, as well as Tanner Health System's Mobil Mammography Unit. Right: Debbie Grant of ADA Medical supply talks with Teresa Garrison at the community event "Get Mad About Cancer." ADA Medical Supply offers post-surgery products like bras, camisoles, arm sleeves and gloves.
