APRIL 2016

As a continuation from discussions that started in May, Claude Wood, President and CEO of Concord Crossroads, LLC, along with a team of businesses [Millennium, Inc., Emerging Technology Consortium, University Research and Development Foundation, Inc.] met with the newly appointed President of Virginia State University [VSU], Dr. Makola M. Abdullah, on April 21, 2016. The meeting focused on how to establish 'A Pathway to Transformative Education' through Academic Industrial Partnerships. In attendance were the Deans and Chairs from Business, Engineering, and Psychology, as well as the leadership from Institutional Advancement, Finance, the University Research Foundation, and the President's Office. Together, a vision for the future was identified in which opportunities are strengthened to existing relationships and pathways are created for partnerships among the University, the business community, and government agencies to leverage resources in federal and state contracts and grants, research and development, intellectual property, and emerging technology. Through the leadership of Mr. Wood, the President of VSU has agreed to form a partnership that will explore opportunities to diversify the funding sources for the University which will enhance VSU's core academic values and ultimately increase the revenue of the University. This new focus will have the goal of increasing the University's revenue from millions to billions, thereby allowing VSU to provide transformative teaching, scholarship, and service.
