Dear Conference Attendees:

We are pleased to welcome you to the 2015 International Association of Official Human Rights Agencies (IAOHRA) Conference in Birmingham, Alabama, at the Sheraton Birmingham, with a day-long bus tour to Selma and Montgomery.

This year’s theme “50 Years After the Passage of the Voting Rights Act: A Victory Threatened” affords us the opportunity to honor the struggles of civil rights leaders and ordinary citizens for the right to vote, to assess current challenges and to define strategies for the future. Fifty years ago Congress made history, coming together across party lines to enact what became arguably the most effective civil rights law in history. That proud legacy is now in danger.

We are excited to provide a conference program that will focus on this important subject of voting rights, and on what needs to be done this year to restore the VRA. We will also present compelling speakers and plenary sessions on international human rights principles, fair housing and police/community relations. We want to thank the speakers and facilitators who will share their expertise with you. We want to acknowledge our sponsors too, and thank them for their ongoing support.

On behalf of the IAOHRA Board, we thank you for joining us at this important moment in history. Your participation is a tribute to IAOHRA’s founders, to the leaders of the civil rights movement, to the Freedom Riders and to our members.

In the next few days we will teach, learn, share, and have fun! We hope you will return home refreshed and energized for the important work that lies ahead.

Sincerely yours,

Jean M. Kelleher, President

2015 IAOHRA Conference
Birmingham, Alabama

Dear Members and Friends:

It is my distinct honor and pleasure to extend a warm greeting to the International Association of Official Human Rights Agencies (IAOHRA) on the occasion of your 2015 conference, as you commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. While we use this opportunity to reflect on our past, we also embrace our presence and remain positive about our future.

This country was once stagnated by bigotry and inequality, we now stand as a nation poised for greatness, where every man, woman and child can live up to their highest potential. As Mayor of the city that changed the world, I understand that I stand on the shoulders of the many that fought for equality and all of those who made sacrifices for me to be in such position; I do not take that for granted.

On behalf of the City of Birmingham, I commend the IAOHRA for your willingness to recognize the strength, character and integrity of all individuals. It is my sincere hope that you will continue to inspire and motivate our men, women and children to be the best leaders they can be.

Sincerely,

William A. Bell, Sr.
Mayor
The Voting Rights Act of 1965 went further to ensure all were allowed to vote by outlawing literacy tests and by providing federal surveillance of areas that had previously discriminated against voters.

IAOHRA AWARDS

Advocate for Social Justice and Civil Rights Award

Charlene Strong

Charlene Strong is a nationally respected advocate for social justice and civil rights issues including marriage equality and non-discrimination policies in the workplace and society. She is a widely sought after writer and speaker presenting to over 50 universities and corporations. Some of her engagements have included the CIA, National Reconnaissance Office in Washington DC, and Department of Justice. Charlene's advocacy has given her the opportunity to meet with Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sibelius, Washington State Governor Christine Gregoire and an invitation the White House to meet with President Barak Obama.

The details of Charlene's advocacy is chronicled in the award winning documentary film, “for my wife…” which tells the story of how Charlene became an advocate for equality after she was denied emergency room access to her late spouse as she lay dying following a flash flood in Seattle in 2006. It was then Charlene realized that all families must have the legal protections of marriage when they need it most. Charlene has been a champion of family recognition for same-sex couples; one month after her spouse’s passing Charlene testified before the senate, and laws were changed to protect all families in Washington State.

Charlene was appointed to the Washington State Human Rights Commission in 2008 and is currently serving her second term.

Charlene lives in Seattle with her wife Courteney, and is a proud parent of her children Etta and Anders.
Julie A. Fernandes is a senior policy advisor at the Open Society Foundations and the Open Society Policy Center where she works to influence public policy in support of the protection of civil and human rights in the United States, with a focus on promoting policies that enhance and strengthen our democracy. Ms. Fernandes also spent a year as the Director of the Alliance to End Slavery and Trafficking, a coalition of national organizations working together to end modern slavery in the U.S. and around the world.

For more than six years, Ms. Fernandes was Senior Counsel at the Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights, where in 2006 she led the civil rights community’s successful effort to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Ms. Fernandes also served as Special Assistant to President Bill Clinton at the White House Domestic Policy Council where she was the DPC’s point person on policy related to the President’s Initiative on Race. She was counsel to the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights, Bill Lann Lee, and was a trial lawyer in the Housing and Voting Sections of the Civil Rights Division.

Individual Achievement Award

The Honorable Judge U. W. Clemon, (retired)

U. W. Clemon was born on April 9, 1943 in Fairfield, Alabama. At age 13, he decided to become a lawyer. While a student at Miles College in 1962, he confronted the infamous Bull Connor over Birmingham’s segregation laws. He marched with Dr. Martin Luther King during the demonstrations the following year, and desegregated the Birmingham Public Library.

After graduating from New York’s Columbia Law School in 1968, he returned to Birmingham and practiced civil rights law for twelve years. Clemon handled school desegregation cases throughout North Alabama. He sued Paul “Bear” Bryant in 1969 to desegregate the University of Alabama’s football team. He also brought employment discrimination cases against some of the largest employers in Alabama.

In 1974, Clemon was one of the first two blacks elected to the Alabama Senate since Reconstruction. As chairman of the Rules Committee and later the Judiciary Committee, he fought against Governor George Wallace’s exclusion of black citizens from state boards and agencies and the reinstatement of the death penalty.

In 1980, U.S. President Jimmy Carter appointed Clemon as Alabama’s first black federal judge when he nominated him for a seat on the United States District Court for the Northern District of Alabama. He later became the chief judge of the Northern District. He was the trial judge in the Ledbetter v. Goodyear case and in several multi-district cases.

Judge Clemon retired from the judiciary on January 31, 2009. He now practices law in Birmingham. He is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

Working Together for Safe, Inclusive Communities: Not In Our Town & The COPS Office

Hate crimes send the message that “people like you” are not welcome here and are not safe here. Even acts of vandalism or crimes against a person that involve only threats or minimal violence can send powerful shockwaves of fear through the targeted group and increase community tensions. It’s not just a criminal justice issue – hate crimes pose an urgent challenge to the entire community.

For these reasons, Not In Our Town and the U.S. Department of Justice Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS Office) have partnered to develop new resources to help law enforcement and community stakeholders work together to prevent and respond to hate crimes, improve hate crime reporting, and strengthen relationships between different groups in the community – and between law enforcement and the community. Through the Working Together for Safe, Inclusive Communities initiative, films, guides, and case studies illustrating real-life challenges and promising practices have been designed to support a wide range of activities, including: internal law enforcement agency trainings; community screenings and discussions; planning workshops; and anti-bias campaigns within schools.

This presentation offers an overview of key strategies and features a preview of film resources. Select films and guides will be distributed to attendees following the program. All project resources are available free of charge at www.niot.org/cops.
The International Association of Official Human Rights Agencies gratefully acknowledges the generous contributions from UPS, the National Community Reinvestment Coalition, the National Association of Realtors, the IAOHRA Conference Planning Committee, the IAOHRA Staff and the Montgomery County Maryland Office of Human Rights.

Special Appreciation to William A. Bell, Sr., Mayor, City of Birmingham, Alabama
“So long as I do not firmly and irrevocably possess the right to vote I do not possess myself. I cannot make up my mind – it is made up for me. I cannot live as a democratic citizen, observing the laws I have helped to enact – I can only submit to the edict of others.”
