Natural waves are information carriers

All naturally occurring waves in nature have a vortex shape (three dimensional). These waves come from sunlight, cosmic radiation, magnetic fields, gravitational fields and others. These waves provide information to the body. The water in the body serves as a recording media and carrier of information just like the videotape or any other magnetic media such as the computer's hard drive, etc.

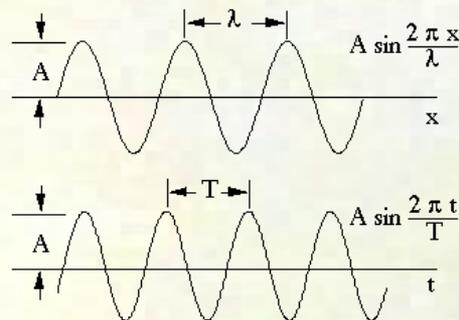

Natural waves are modulators of the body

The information received by the body from the natural waves serve to regulate the body's biorhythms and the function of the organs and glands. It also modulates the DNA. Without this information the glands and the organs cannot function and communicate with each other properly, and the body cannot adapt to his environment. This is the reason that people feel better in a natural environment.

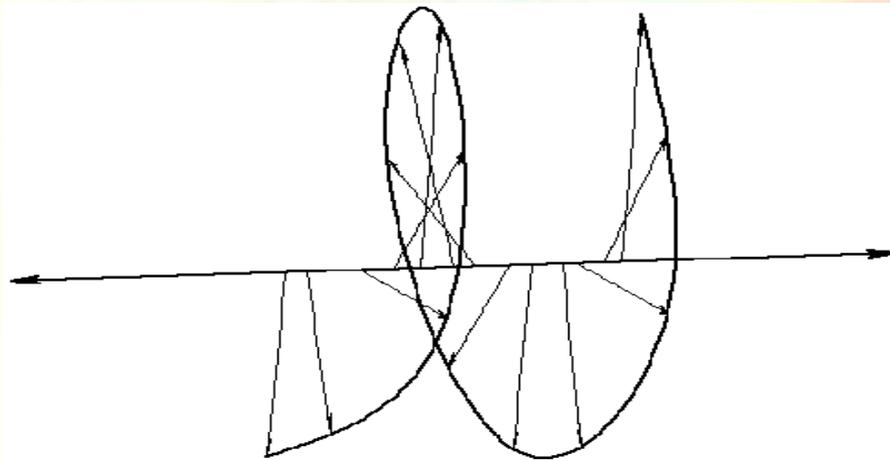

Artificial waves interfere with biological systems

All man made waves: electric electromagnetic fields, radio, TV, microwave towers, cell phones and many others are made from bi-dimensional sinus waves. These waves when they mix with natural waves alter the natural waves and therefore change the original information. As a result the body receives misinformation and the normal function of the DNA, organs and glands is disturbed. This contributes to illness, disease, aging and emotional and mental stress. Extreme example to this phenomena is when people are exposed to very intense electromagnetic pollution such as people who work in front of computer monitors every day for years will suffer severe health problems. People who live under high power lines for a long period of time are more likely to get cancer etc.

BioSyntonie Restores Vortex Waves Utilizing Natural Resonance Phenomena

Biosyntony restores the normal vortex waves by the resonance phenomena. The ceramic memory discs resonate and create vortex waves whenever they are exposed to natural or artificial waves. The various crystalline materials in the discs emit beneficial vortex waves which will restore the correct information to the body thus improving its functions physiologically and energetically. This phenomena results in greater well-being as well as acceleration of healing physically, emotionally and mentally.

What are colloidal Solutions?

The term colloid means an adhesive. A colloidal solution is a stable medium made up of water and suspended particles. The only difference between a true solution and a colloidal solution is in the size of the suspended particles. When small particles, sugar for example, are dissolved in water – they are diffused in all the available space of the solution: This is what we call a true solution. When large molecules have a significant volume or they aggregate in larger particles they can, in spite of their size, disperse in water and remain in suspension without precipitating. They are in a steady balance between the forces of attraction and repulsion. This is a colloidal solution. In all living systems, water is in a state of colloidal solution.

Colloids are particles of a given substance which preserve its identity in a state of suspension in a liquid. A colloidal solution is a mixture, in the form of liquid or gel. It contains suspended and finely divided particles. These particles, are called colloidal objects, micelles or clusters (polymeric molecules). They are super size molecules, i.e. bigger than a single molecule or atom. However they are small enough to stay in homogeneous suspension in the liquid and not precipitate. Their size is between a nanometer (10^{-9}m) and ten micrometers (10^{-5} m), which makes them easily absorbed by the cells of the body. Plants convert minerals into colloids

The dynamic properties of colloids:

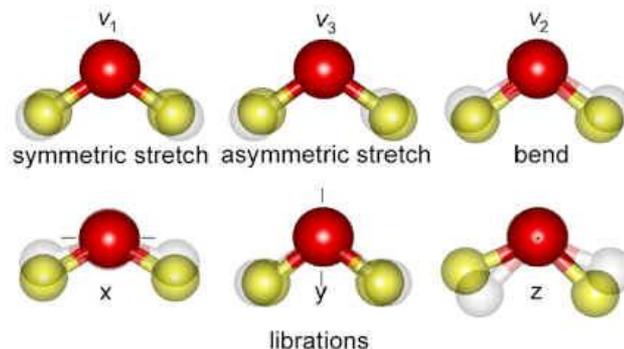

The colloids behave like a small prisms. They enter in resonance and refract the ever changing natural waves in our environment around us. This refraction phenomena is similar to a prism which refracts light in to rainbow colors. This interaction determines the rhythms of the biorhythms if the natural and electromagnetic environment allows it.

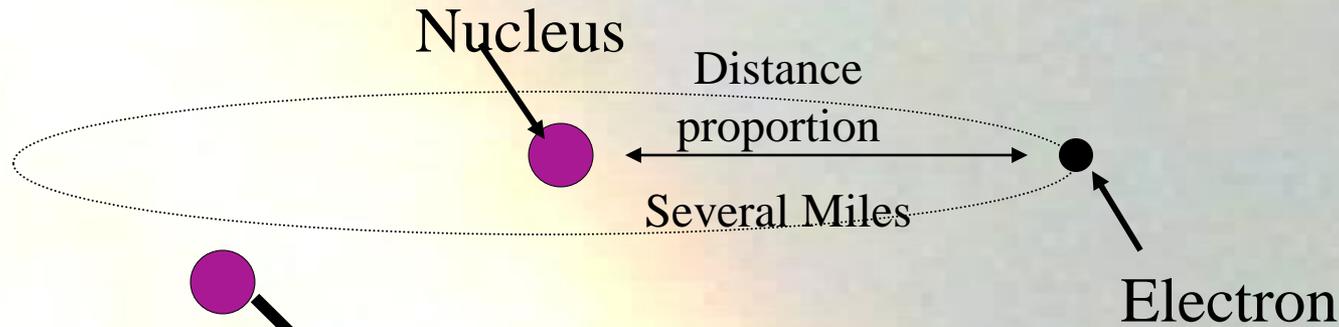

The colloids enables the cells, organs and glands of the body to receive information, which helps modulate and regulate their biological function in every aspect of the physiological activities. If the biological environment is disturbed by electromagnetic, chemical and other forms of pollution, the colloidal information will become erroneous and will result in disturbances in the biological regulations of the human body.

Terre de Lys colloidal solutions are made from natural colloids made from Iron, cupper, gold, silver and other trace elements. When sprayed on clothing and body, they will create a proper natural resonance which will restore the body into improved energetic state.

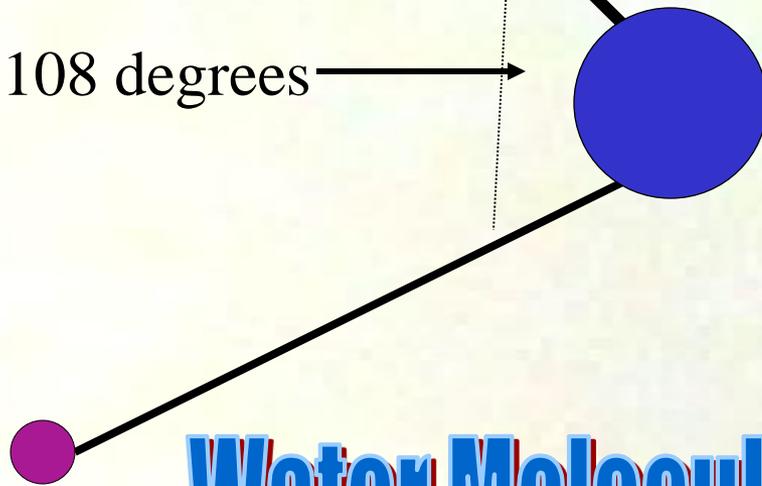

The role of water in nature and in our body

Our body is made up of 70-90% water depending on our age. The reason for this is that water in nature functions as a storage and transfer system for information just like the videotape in our VCR. Videotapes record information in the form of electromagnetic charges which are then read by another device that transforms the electrical charges into sound and picture information. Water is capable of storing information because the angle between the two hydrogen and one oxygen molecules can vary by 20 degrees. The distance between the two molecules can vary as well.

88 to 108 degrees

Water Molecule

The variation of the angle created by the two hydrogen and oxygen molecules. And the variation in the trajectory of the electrons create infinitesimal combinations. Each combination is a unit of information.

The information given to the water by the surrounding energy waves. When you freeze the water it shows the The example in nature is snow flakes. There is non alike

Natural waves will create 3D symmetric crystallization like snow flakes.

Artificial man made waves with create non symmetrical crystals when frozen.

When water is crystallized in nature i.e.manifests as snow flakes, non is alike due to the infinitesimal variations in the information content of the water molecules

WATER SERVES AS RECORDER OF INFORMATION

When a certain color is projected on water or a specific musical note is played toward a container of water it will cause distinct and measurable changes in the physical characteristics of the water such as PH and surface tension.

Those who study homeopathy know that by sequentially succussing (shaking) and diluting various substances in water we impart the energetic fingerprint of the substance to the water. This energized water is then put into pellet or tincture form and used for energetic stimulation of the natural healing processes of the body.

WATER IN NATURE

When water comes as rain it records cosmic electric information.

When water enters earth it records magnetic information and minerals in colloidal phase from earth.

Inside earth water is found in 3 layers:

In the superficial aquifer where the information is not yet optimal

In the aquifer which feeds springs where the information is perfect.

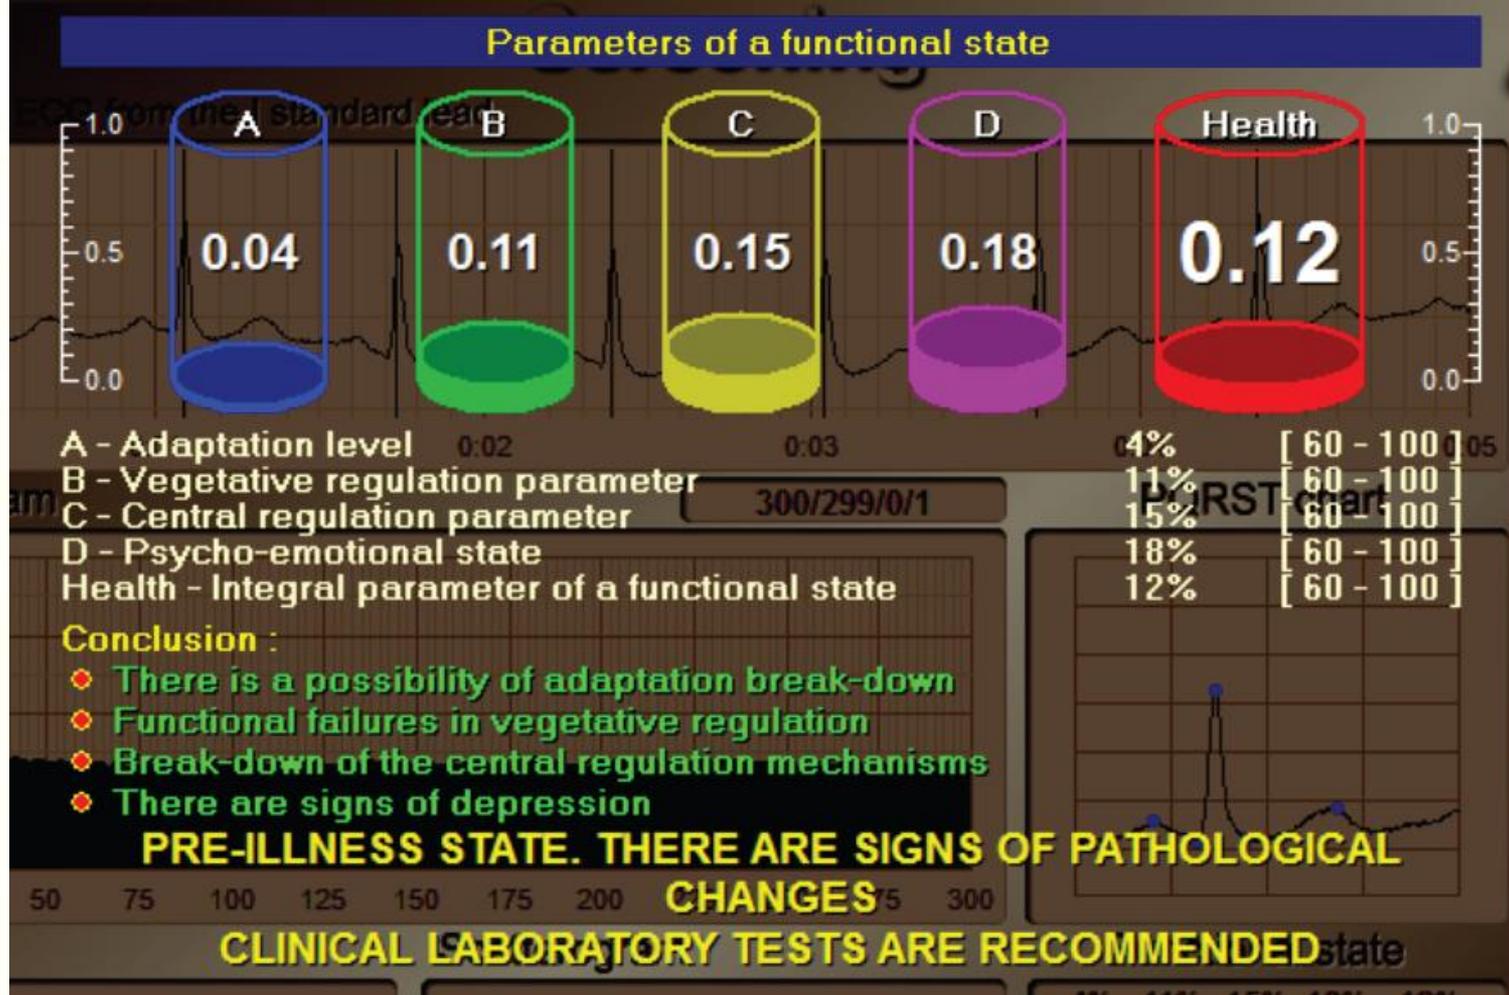

Old aquifer the water has old information.

A. Shallow aquifer (where we often tap to dig wells)

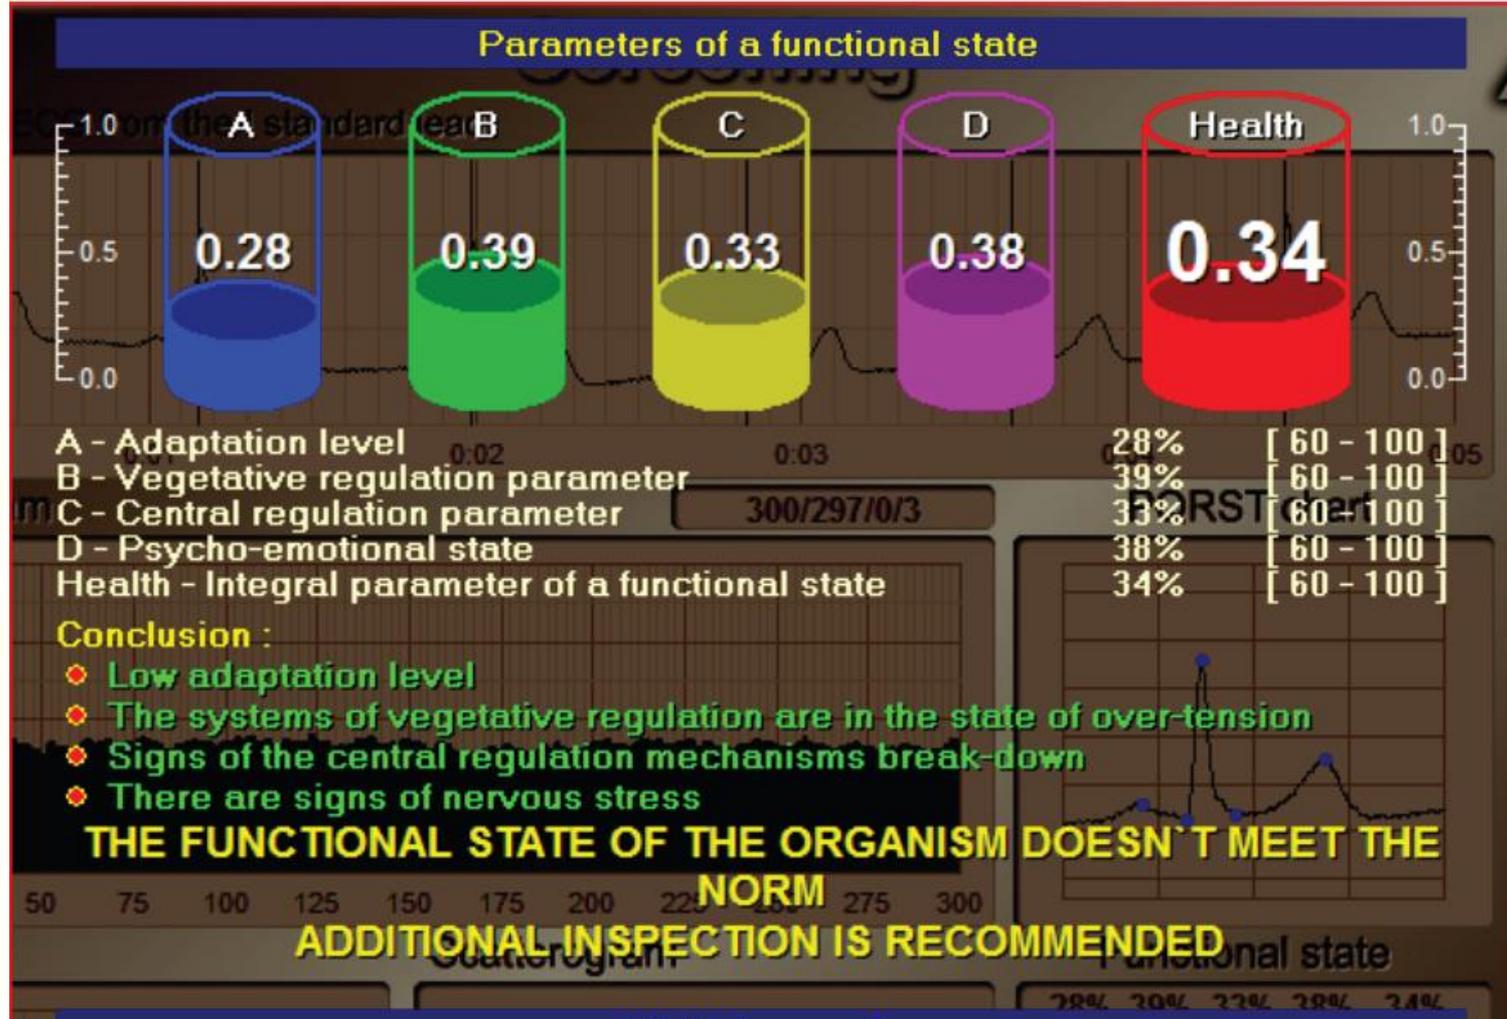

B. Aquifer which feeds springs. When water has the optimal information it exits earth.

C. Ancient aquifer. (70 –20,000 years old or more. not appropriate for our current needs)

THE ROLE OF DNA IN HEALTH AND CONSCIOUSNESS

The DNA modulates and controls all biochemical processes in the body

The DNA acts as receiver and transmitter of energy (information)

The DNA stores information such as the mass consciousness of our ancestry at least 6 generations back, our genetics miasms and the experiences of our consciousness from this lifetimes and others (past lives? If it is acceptable to your current belief system)

The DNA is modulated and effected by natural and artificial waves as well as by our emotions (which are created by our conscious and subconscious beliefs).

Sources of man made pollution

1. Electromagnetic: Electric currents, microwaves, Wi Fi, TV, computers, cell phones, portable phones, DECT Portable phones, high power lines, cell phone antennas, electronic healing devices,, smart meters, etc.

2. Refrigerators and freezers

3. Nuclear pollution

4. Magnets

5. Noise pollution

Causes of Disease

This figure shows the major causes for illness. Any of the above can contribute to illness and prevent the body for healing. Each person may be effected to different extent by any of these issues.

Statistical Distribution of sensitivity

Each person will have different sensitivity to the various issues shown on the previous slide. The Bell curve above demonstrate the statistical distribution in the population. For example very small percentage of the population will be very sensitive to Radio frequency and electromagnetic pollution.

Sensitive people will (see red 3% in the graph); have sever symptoms when near a WI FI device or cell phone. The rest 97% will not notice much or anything, and when their health suffers they will not relate it to the cumulative detrimental effect of this pollution on their body. The same apply to all the other issues described in the previous slide.

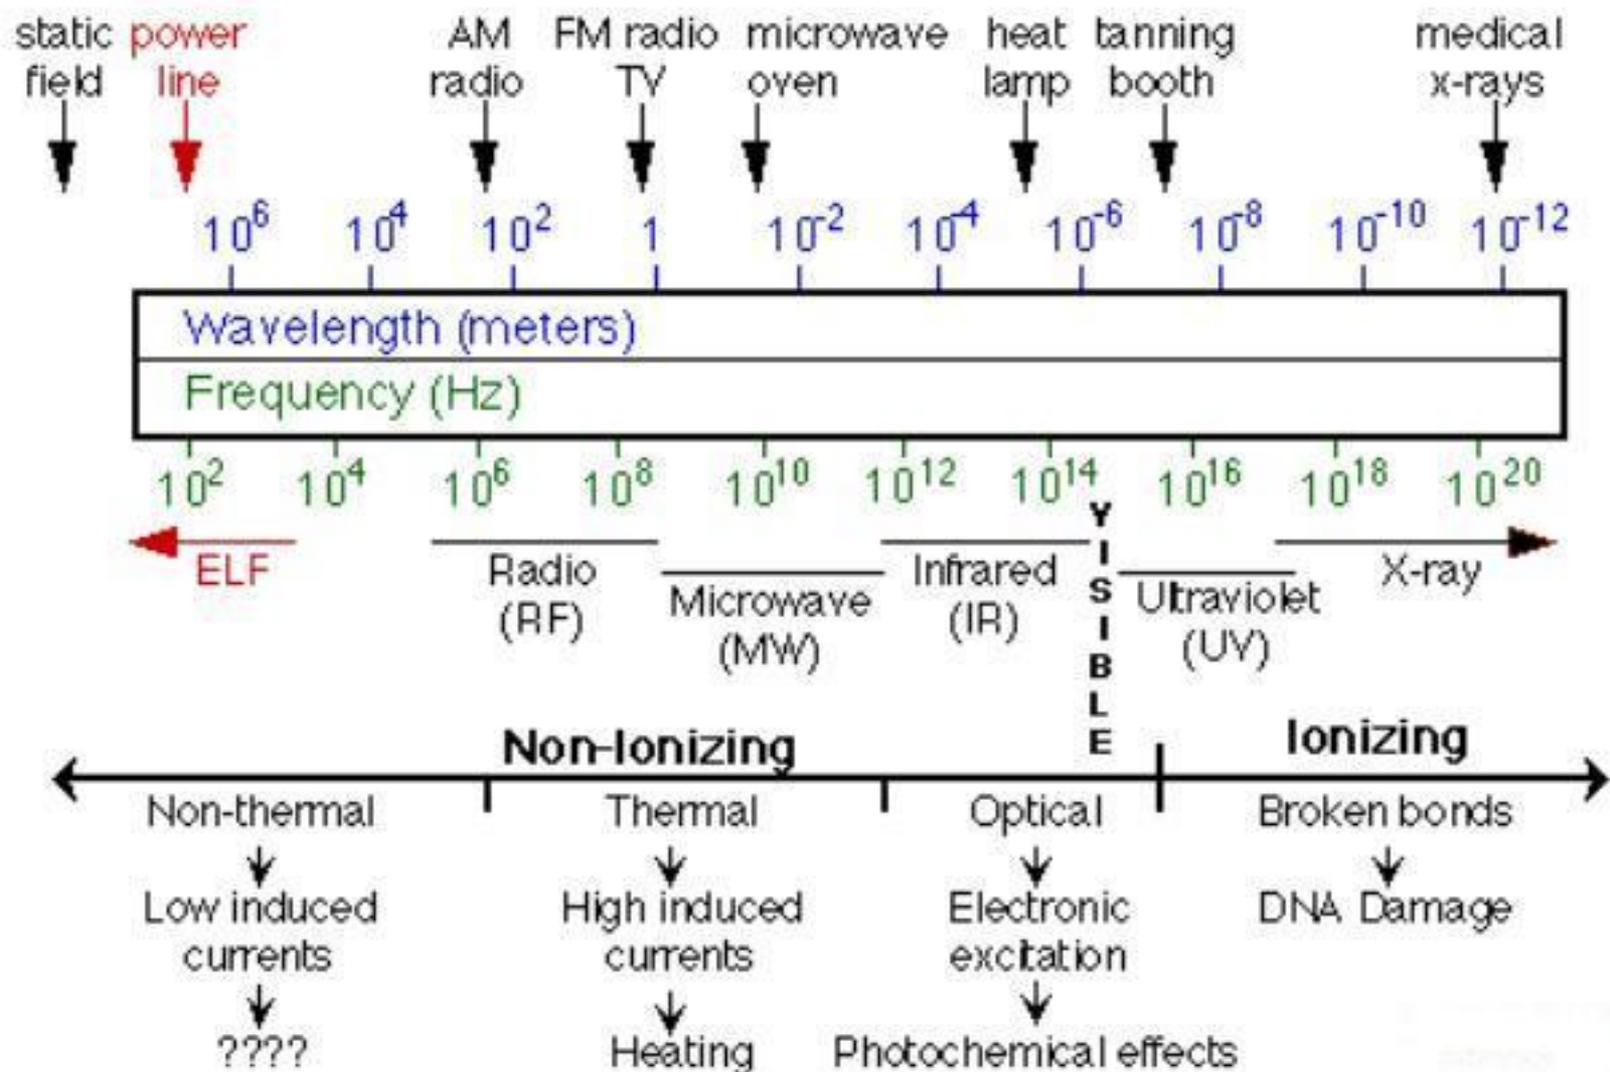

Keep in mind that the main contributing factor to the development of a specific illness can vary from person to person

Electromagnetic pollution

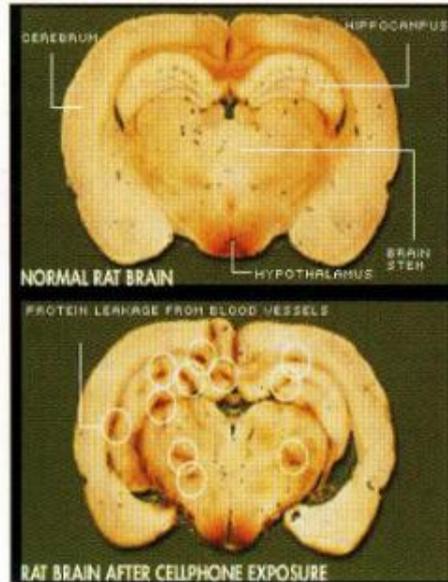

Gives misinformation to the water and DNA in the body and in turn interferes with the proper functions of organs, glands and communication between them. The mis-information disrupts the function of the body just like corrupted files or virus in a computer.

Refrigerators and freezers

The compression of gases in the refrigeration process creates wave disturbances in the gaseous phase in the ethers. These waves interfere with the gaseous phase in the body including the nitrogen and hydrogen. This affects bone function, production of blood cells and bone building, causing osteoporosis and disturbances in the central nervous system function and DNA function. These effects may contribute to the development of cancer and other serious illnesses. Pollution from refrigeration is amplified by underground water veins and earth faults.

Noise pollution

Air pollution, in case you missed the memo, is really bad for you. But what's nearly as bad for you could come as a shock: irritating noises. According to a study from the the World Health Organization and the European Commission's Joint Research Center. The report, Burden of Disease From Environmental Noise, claims that western Europeans lose up to 1.6 million years of healthy living annually from noise pollution, compared to 4.5 million years lost for air pollution (noise is only second to air pollution in environmental hazards, according to WHO). How does the WHO come up with these figures?

The report claims that noise pollution leads to major health problems, including heart disease, cognitive impairment, sleep disturbance and tinnitus. By far the biggest noise-related health issue is annoyance and sleep interruption from road traffic (this should be familiar to all city-dwellers). Lack of sleep means a generally less healthy life. But other sources of noise-- construction, loud neighbors, drunks at the local bar, fireworks, snowmobiles-- are also contributors.

Nuclear Pollution

When atoms are split in a nuclear reactor, which is another non natural occurring phenomena, it results in disturbance waves. These waves disturbs the function of the thyroid, hypophysis and epiphysis. It also interferes with the functions of the gonads and the integration of the natural magnetic earth energy into our body.

Magnets

Magnets cause the water molecule to be blocked in a contracted state (smaller angle). It blocks the capacity of water to expand and contract which is necessary for the proper function of living systems. Studies showed that magnetic fields as small as $1/2000$ of a gauss causes sever dysfunction in glandular function.
