DC METRO FOOD TOURS SERVES UP NEW SIDE OF DC Cherry Blossom Food Tour - Latest Item on Menu

WASHINGTON—March 15, 2017 Grab your friends and satisfy your cravings with DC Metro Food Tours' latest creation, the Cherry Blossom Food Tour. Just in time for the 2017 Cherry Blossom Festival, see a side of DC you haven't seen before.

DC Metro Food Tours blends a mixture of flavor and fun in its newest tour. Explore the culture and cuisine of Old Town Alexandria, Capitol Hill or Georgetown—three of the earliest and most iconic neighborhoods in the DC area. Throughout March and into April, area chefs will offer Cherry Blossom Festival-themed dishes inspired by Japanese cuisine or based on the sweet and savory cherry.

The tour company, known for integrating an area's culture, history and architecture with food and drink, encourages visitors to discover a behind-the-scenes look at favorite locales and have fun in the process.

“Participating in our food tours is a great way to connect with friends, get to know your colleagues and network with people you haven’t even met yet,” says owner Jeff Swedarsky.

The walking tours, which last about 3.5 hours, are led by a knowledgeable tour guide, who shares interesting facts about each historical area while also concentrating on the unique culinary aspects of each eatery. Toss in a scavenger hunt, music and cherry wine and see why these tours get rave reviews.

Tickets are $68 per person and can be purchased through ZOZI online. Tours run Thursdays through Sundays from 2:30 to 6:00 p.m.

“What a great way to experience the food and history of Capitol Hill,” says Xiaoshan Wang, a neuroscientist visiting the District as part of a National Institutes of Health study group. “The food was fantastic and plentiful, and I really enjoyed learning new things about the area. If you’re looking for something different, this is it.”
