

a laboratory
for performance

Munich: 27th-29th April 2018

Physical Lab is an international laboratory for acting and performance.

We work with ensemble training practices alongside one to one training, focusing on individualised professional development. Our methodology utilises body and voice, intellect and imagination, and all tools available to the performing artist. The participants engage consciously and subconsciously to create authentic, responsive performances.

Over two intensive days we will work with text from scripts or screenplays. We will engage with techniques including physical grounding, emotional exploration, identifying acting habits, scene study and character building.

The aim is to assist actors to build their own technique/ways into acting.

For more information visit www.physicallab.co.uk

The training is led by Yorgos Karamalegos.

Yorgos is an actor, director, and physical acting teacher.

He is the founder and Artistic Director of the laboratory and co-founded Tmesis Theatre Company and Physical Fest. He has also taught and directed at LAMDA, RADA, Drama Centre, The Actors Centre in London, Williams College (USA), as well as leading workshops and residencies nationally and internationally.
