WELCOME TO THE EUROPEAN STUDENT CONFERENCE 2019

Thank you for accepting our invitation to the European Student Conference 2019 at Yale University. It is through your engagement that this conference will be a success both when it comes to producing valuable ideas and motivating the next generation of European thinkers.

European Horizons' mission is, through organizing events, connecting people, and putting forward new ideas, to strengthen the confidence of our Union. As a transatlantic student-led think tank, European Horizons develops out-of-the-box ideas that bring a fresh perspective to Europe's challenges. It is through this mission and vision that European Horizons, and everyone in our community, want to directly change the European Union.

The concept of the European Student Conference began with a group of European students at Yale University who were inspired by their deep commitment to the future of the European ideal and the state of transatlantic relations. Studying and living in the United States, these students aspired to unite bright young minds to articulate and advance a credible plan for the future of the European Union. The European Student Conference serves as the organization's main event. Europe is going through a transition period. Challenges confront the European Union on multiple fronts, ranging from security to Brexit to identity. The aim of this conference is to take on these challenges, engaging students in debate with distinguished professors, current and former decision-makers from Europe, and renowned policy experts. The headline challenge of this year's conference is "Redefining the role of Europe in a multipolar world."

We are especially grateful for the partnerships and supports of the European Parliament Liaison Office with the U.S. Congress, the Konrad Adenauer Stiftung, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the the Republic of China (Taiwan), the Schwarzman Scholars Foundation as well as the Yale MacMillian Center, French Department and Global Affairs Department.

In addition, this event is funded in part by the European Union and is under the patronage of the European Parliament.

OVERVIEW

In April 2019, around 100 undergraduate and graduate students from across the United States, Europe, and all over the world will gather at Yale University for the fifth annual European Student Conference, to discuss some of the major challenges facing the European Union today.

As in previous years, the students will be selected from universities all over the world, in a competitive application process. On the basis of previous years, we expect that many participants will be American, Canadian, or European nationals, and a significant portion will be other international students.

The student participants will be joined at the conference by twenty dignitaries from politics, diplomacy, business, academia, and the media, who will share their knowledge and expertise with the students in workshops and panel discussions. Throughout the conference, the students will craft policy papers that shed new light on European challenges in the realms of Democracy, National Sovereignty, Brexit, Security, EU-East Asia Relations, Energy, and Technology. The aim of the European Student Conference is for students to take on these challenges, by engaging in critical thinking and enriching discussion and debate.

FORMAT

The conference is structured around three main formats:

- Keynote speeches will be held by some of our guests from the world of European politics and transatlantic relations in the opening and closing plenaries, followed by questions from the audience.
- Three panels will be held throughout the course of the conference, featuring up to three guest experts, as well as a moderator. Each 60-minute panel will focus on a select topic currently dominating our discussion and understanding of Europe. Panels are followed by ~20 minutes of questions from the audience.
- Workshops of up to 20 students, advised by up to three guest experts, will each tackle one of the conference themes outlined on the following page. Students will arrive at the conference having already prepared drafts of their policy papers, and will revise their ideas in light of their group discussions in three workshop sessions throughout the conference. Each group will present a final policy paper proposing concrete policy solutions on the final day of the conference.

OUTCOME

Before the conference, students in groups will discuss their policy ideas for the themes of their respective workshops and formulate them into policy-papers. The headline challenge of this year's conference is "Redefining the role of Europe in a multipolar world," and the workshop topics are framed around this challenge.

At the conference, students will present their policy papers to one another, as well as to the decision-makers and professors. During the workshops, they will exchange ideas and engage in common discussion with other participants in order to refine their policy solutions. They will present the final versions of the policy-papers during the final presentation session on day two of the conference.

After the conference, the students will go back to their respective universities and share their policy ideas for Europe's future with their university communities. Furthermore, European Horizons will publish the policy-papers in our journal, the Review of European and Transatlantic Affairs, and distribute the journal to university libraries across the European Union and the US, as well as to European decision-makers. For prior editions of the journal please visit: <http://europeanhorizons.org>

PANELS

2019 EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT ELECTION AND BEYOND, SPONSORED BY THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT LIAISON OFFICE WITH THE US CONGRESS

During the upcoming European Parliament Elections, between the 23rd and the 26th of May, European citizens in each member state will elect the 751 Members of the European Parliament who will represent them in the European Union's legislative branch. This panel will focus on the central issues that are dominating these elections, including rising populism and Euroscepticism, Brexit, and economic issues. Our panelists will also discuss the impacts the EP Election outcomes will have on the future trajectory of the EU, and will debate which key areas the European Parliament should focus on in the next cycle.

Marco Biagi

Marco Biagi formerly served as the Minister for Local Government and Community Empowerment and as a Member of the Scottish Parliament for the Scottish National Party. He holds a degree in International Relations from the University of St Andrews

REDEFINING EUROPE IN A CHANGING WORLD ORDER

This panel will focus on the new roles and challenges the EU faces in response to the changing world order. As the US pursues isolationist policy and China takes on an increasingly prominent role globally, the EU must adapt politically and economically. This panel will discuss how trade agreements can protect the identities and strengths of Member States, while also pooling the collective EU to bring about efficient, far-reaching trade partnerships. In a time when some less-democratic states are moving toward protectionist stances or are buying access to other states through mammoth investments, how can the EU uphold the track record of multilateralism in its trade deals that makes it an inclusive partner on a global scale.

Moderator

Dr. Julia Puaschunder

Julia Puaschunder is a postdoctoral Scientist in the Inter-University Consortium of New York. She has a MPhil in Philosophy/Psychology from the University of Vienna, a MBA from the Vienna University of Economics and Business, a MPA from the Maxwell School, and Doctorates in Social and Economic Sciences from the Vienna University of Economics and Business, and Natural Sciences from the University of Vienna.
