Project Rose Research Institute for Sports Science -- the state-of-the-art, world-class facility and sports medicine research lab based in Tyler, Texas -- is pleased to announce a technology partnership with MindSquare, the revolutionary concussion assessment mobile app!

A real game changer in concussion assessment!

Never before has there been a concussion assessment tool that delivers such immediacy and accuracy. The MindSquare app, available from Project Rose Sports Science Program, provides real-time concussion assessment and analytics for anyone with a potential concussion: from amateur and elite athletes – to anybody with a head injury caused by a fall, motor vehicle accident, being struck by an object, or whatever involves TBI to the head.

Powered by Artificial Intelligence, the MindSquare app provides members of Project Rose Sports Science Program with immediate concussion assessment. Full, comprehensive, assessments are conducted completely from a mobile device with access to real time data through an online portal. Data is accessible from anywhere in the world within seconds of performing an assessment from the mobile application.

The HIPAA-compliant app provides precise assessment based on several factors, including cognition, eye tracking, reaction, and balance. MindSquare uses proprietary speech recognition, unique computer vision algorithms and machine learning to make even more intelligent assessments. In addition, the app goes through an emergency vitals checklist in order to provide immediate assistance when needed.
