The aim of an Endurance race is to do as many laps as possible in the time allowed.

You must complete the first lap to get a result. After the first lap you can start and finish laps whenever you wish.

After the cut off time you will not be allowed to start a new lap, but if you have already started the lap before the cut off time you will be able to complete the lap and it will be counted in your results.

If you stop riding before the cut off time your completed laps will still count and you will get a result.

Start Procedure:

The 6 hour start will feature a prologue which takes riders on an extra fire road section to help ease congestion before hitting the single track.

The 3 hour riders will also begin on a prologue fire road section to ensure they are spread out before entering single track to avoid congestion.

The Course:

- A Fun filled action packed course with plenty of ups and as many flowy descents. Course is approximately 11.5 km in length with 250m of elevation. Click here for a Strava link to the course map. The benefit of a long course is to help spread out the field to avoid congestion.

- First lap of both the 6 hour and 3 hour events will feature a fire road section (prologue) to spread out the field and avoid any single track bottle necks.
