

What do you do if you want to visit a country for the first time? You ask yourself things like; Is it safe? Do I need a visa? What is interesting about this place? You start by requesting information, guidance and recommendations in your own country about the place you want to visit; you make inquiries with the many travel agents that offer this destination; you get inspired by what others say about their own experiences or you decide to discover it on your own. I am Robert Murray originally from the UK. I made the decision to travel to Colombia to discover for myself what my counterparts could find. I started my journey, leaving the UK on a voyage of discovery and to find myself in a warmth beyond that provided by the sun; the people of Colombia welcomed me with hospitality, smiles, respect and my uncertainties disappeared. This warm, sunny, bright and colourful country captured my imagination and as if that were not enough; here, also, I found love.
