

21C skills lab

Tomorrow's skills for today's students.

Businesses are wrestling with increasing cohorts of workers with obsolete skills, and a shortfall of workers who are fit to fill the new roles that have been opened.

Reskilling workers is important, but preparing tomorrow's workers is a matter of economic survival. Our current education system is not delivering for a twenty-first century (21C) economy. We are developing programmes to foster the 21C skills needed for Aotearoa's businesses and future workers to thrive.

Building educator capability

Participating teachers are matched with a partner from an innovative business.

They share their experiences of the worlds of work and education.

The pair is supported to co-design a transformative real-world learning experience for students.

LIKE A BOSS

Teaching twenty-first century skills

The Like A Boss programme guides students to create their own people- or planet-focused enterprise.

Modules connect easily to the existing curriculum.

The process is geared towards developing entrepreneurship, creativity, communication, and financial literacy.
