

Handmade, Amigo Announce Upcoming Album With Release of First Single

Orlando, FL - October 27, 2017 - Handmade, Amigo, a punk/soul/pop/indie-rock band from Orlando, Florida, have announced the upcoming release of their album 'For the Living Ones'. The announcement came with the release of the album's first single "Caught in the Rain".

The album's second single is due to be released on November 30, followed by a music video on December 7. 'For the Living Ones' will be released on January 12, 2018 at a release event featuring local music, stand-up comedy, "Handmade, Burritos," and a Nintendo 64 NFL Blitz 2K1 arcade at Heno Contemporary Center in Orlando, Florida.

Handmade, Amigo are unique in the ability they possess to synthesize the sounds of punk, soul, pop and rock and top it off with lush vocal harmonies.

Andrew Weeks, songwriter and guitarist in Handmade, Amigo said, "Handmade, Amigo harnesses the energy of the best staple punk bands without succumbing to the trappings that made those bands fall out of favor and become uninteresting — things like the same repetitive formula, limited scope of lyrical content, and boring or obscure punk clichés."

Echoing those sentiments, Kevin Bond, fellow songwriter and guitarist in the band said, "Handmade, Amigo brings Phil Spector's classic Wall of Sound technique of recording to the modern indie punk bangers we hope to create."

"Handmade, Amigo uses harmonies not as window dressing like most bands, but as an epic and integral weapon among many in our arsenal," said Weeks.

The palpable sincerity of the band's songs is in large part due to the band's DIY home recording nature as well.

Regarding how the band records, Weeks said, "The approach gives our music an earnestness and authenticity that has been lacking in contemporary music. What we do is able to stand apart from the dime-store anybody-can-do-it stuff put out by so many artists of the GarageBand generation."
