

Handmade, Amigo Release Second Single With Music Video in Anticipation of Debut Record

Orlando, FL - October 27, 2017 - Handmade, Amigo, a punk/soul/pop/indie-rock band from Orlando, Florida, have released the second single called “Let It Roll, or The Whale” from their album set to be released on January 12, 2018 called ‘For the Living Ones.’ The single release is accompanied by a music video of the song produced by the band, and follows October’s release of “Caught in the Rain”.

‘For the Living Ones’ will be released on January 12, 2018 at a release event featuring local music, stand-up comedy, “Handmade Burritos,” and a Nintendo 64 NFL Blitz 2K1 arcade at Henao Contemporary Center in Orlando, Florida.

Handmade, Amigo are unique in the ability they possess to synthesize the sounds of punk, soul, pop and indie-rock and top it off with lush vocal harmonies.

Andrew Weeks, songwriter and guitarist in Handmade, Amigo said, “Handmade, Amigo harnesses the energy of the best staple punk bands without succumbing to the trappings that made the genre fall out of favor and become uninteresting to many — things like the same repetitive formula, limited scope of lyrical content, and sometimes obscure punk clichés.”

Echoing those sentiments, Kevin Bond, fellow songwriter and guitarist in the band said, “Handmade, Amigo brings Phil Spector’s classic Wall of Sound technique of recording to the modern indie-punk bangers we hope to create.”

“Handmade, Amigo uses harmonies not as window dressing like most bands, but as an epic and integral weapon among many in our arsenal,” said Weeks.

The palpable sincerity of the band's songs is in large part due to their DIY approach to recording the songs as well.

Regarding how the band records, Weeks said, "The approach gives our music an earnestness and authenticity that can be said to be lacking in contemporary music. What we do is able to stand apart from the dime-store, anybody-can-do-it GarageBand stuff flooding the airwaves."
