Yarning Strong for Resourceful & Effective Teams
What is Yarning Strong For Resourceful and Effective Teams?

Yarning Strong for Resourceful and Effective Teams is a Conversational Typology Workshop which identifies language as the core competency in getting the most out of your personal and professional relationships whilst working with people. Unlike other workshops this workshop is facilitated by an experienced Aboriginal Ontological facilitator who has studied Non Violent Communication & Crucial Conversations. Its very intention is to teach skills and techniques so that participants become more conversationally proficient for effective relationship management.

This program was launched in Bega New South Wales, where participants from a range of local, state and federal community organisations became a community of Yarning Strong practice working collaboratively to take care of the concerns of its Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander service users and Community.

Our organisations and communities are systems that function through human interaction. The quality of these interactions rely on our conversations.

When we give ourselves permission to operate under empathy connectedness and presencing frameworks, we are better equipped to meet needs with effective solutions.

What participants will take away with them:

- Conversational tools and models;
- How to empathise in a way that doesn’t block compassion;
- How to turn perceived failures into learning conversations;
- Exploring the basic linguistic acts to prevent basic linguistic traps;
- Learn how to give and receive feedback confidently &
- Much more!

A range of organisations have registered their executives, managers, supervisors, policy makers and field operatives (Indigenous and non-indigenous) to this program, for the benefit of becoming more resourceful in their roles as they navigate a range of contemporary workplace challenges.

Testimonial

“Veronica facilitated our Children's Services annual training day. There are so many words to describe her outstanding facilitation skills. She is intelligent, knowledgeable and engaging. Veronica had everyone immersed within minutes and even after lunch! She managed to weave all of our requests into one session around leadership, strategies for connecting with each other, colleagues and families and building everyone’s knowledge about Aboriginal history and culture. Most importantly, Veronica has a terrific sense of humour so it helped us on our learning journey alongside making us laugh a lot. Veronica came recommended to us from local Aboriginal women who participated in the National Indigenous leadership program – we are so pleased we followed up on their advice.”
