

What I've never seen.—I've never seen a person happy, unless it was one who endeavored to promote the happiness of others.

I've never seen an honest man squander that in dress, and dissipation, which he should of right pay over to his creditors.

ARISTOTLE.

Learning is an ornament in prosperity a refuge in adversity, and a good provision for old age.—CICERO.

RESPECT.—This is a tribute which vice is always compelled to pay to virtue.
