General Description: The name says it all for Robokill. But put a finer point on it, in Robokill the player assumes the role of a humanoid robot with mountable guns and other upgrades which can be bought throughout the game. You also go through a character levelling system, so Robokill basically a standard 'action role play game'.

The graphics and animation are great for a free game, however many buttons and agility with your pointing device are required to have proper control over game play.

Also the concepts of character advancement and upgrading equipment may be confusing or inappropriate for some players.
