

ROYAL THAI ARMY

PHOTO PAGE

Below is as full a listing as possible of the aircraft operated by the Royal Thai Army; an attempt has been made to list the aircraft chronologically.

MAP data below is largely courtesy of Sid Nanson plus the NARA archive at <http://aad.archives.gov/aad/series-description.jsp?s=3284&cat=GS30&bc=,sl>. Note that all FY 1963 dates mean 1963 or earlier; eg. the Beavers listed as FY 1963 were in fact delivered around 1959.

The listing is largely based on personal observations and research, with thanks also due to the Royal Thai Army, many Air Britain publications, Flight International, Martin Best (helicopters), Jos Stevens & Jeremy Parkin (helicopters), Rudolf Merison (CH-47), Paul Rushton (Maules), Marco Dijkshoorn (Scramble), Tom Milliken, Neil Aird (Beavers), Derek King, Ed Young's "Aerial Nationalism – A History of Aviation in Thailand" (Smithsonian 1995), Vasapa (Tango), Mike Ody (Canadian data), Gordon Wimmer, Ian Carroll and others.

The Thai Army first established an independent air arm on 02Jun52, and was based at Lopburi Army Aviation Center from 1956.

Serial number system

Army aircraft are usually marked by the Thai characters มข which can be translated as the letters ‘t.b.’, an abbreviation for ‘tahan bok’ = Army

Aircraft usually wear serials derived from their previous USAF serial or c/n, e.g. O-1A ‘1618’ is ex 50-1618; UH-1H ‘6039’ is c/n 16039.

- From 'In Buddha's Company', by Richard Ruth, 2011 "Of all the stories about Thais who smuggled US Army weapons back to Thailand, one in particular gained legendary status among members of the Royal Thai Army for its audacity and high profile. Lieutenant General Chalad Hiranyasiri, the Thai commander entrusted by MACV to crack down on the Thai malfeasance in 1969, "embezzled" a US Army helicopter as a "souvenir" of his time in South Vietnam. He kept it on the grounds of the Royal Thai Army's First Infantry Regiment. Chalad, who was described by one Thai military writer as "bighearted," used the helicopter to give rides to children each year on Children's Day. Nearly three decades after Chalad was executed for his coup attempt, the helicopter was still in use";
