PHOTO PAGE

Below is as full a listing as possible of the aircraft operated by Kaset (Thai Ministry of Agriculture), and more recently by MNRE (Thai Ministry of Natural Resources & Environment); an attempt has been made to list the aircraft chronologically.

The listing is largely based on personal observations and research, with thanks also due to many Air Britain publications, Flight International, Martin Best (helicopters), Jeremy Parkin (helicopters), Marco Dijkshoorn (Scramble), Tom Milliken, Jos Stevens, Gordon Wimmer, Ray Deerness and others.

Accidents to unidentified Kaset aircraft were on 04Sep69 ('Cessna 130 Beachcraft'), 27Jly74 ('single-engined cropduster') and 19Mar95 ('2-seat light aircraft')

Serial number system

Initially, aircraft operated with civil registrations in the standard HS- series. However from about 1969 (maybe as early as 1967) Kaset introduced their own serial number system with initially three, and more recently four or sometimes five, numbers. The first numbers indicates the type and the last two or three numbers the individual serial. Existing aircraft were removed from the civil aircraft register and re-serialled in the new system.

For example type 2 was the Cessna 180, and the existing aircraft were re-serialled 201, 202, 203 etc. Type 15 is the CASA 212, and aircraft are serialled 1511, 1512 etc. Type 1 was probably the Cessna 170, but they were withdrawn from service at about the time the new system came into operation and do not seem to have worn serials in the 101, 102 etc range. At present the system has reached Type 23 (the Bell 407).

Individual Aircraft Listing

In the aircraft listings below, the suffix * after a serial or c/n indicates that this has been physically checked against the airframe.
