Old Otterbein, Martin Boehm, John Fohl, Peter Kemp... The list goes on. Many of these names were just that—names. However, due to the efforts of the Central PA, Eastern PA, and Baltimore-Washington Conferences; NE Jurisdiction Commission on Archives & History; Old Otterbein Church; Lovely Lane Church and Strawbridge Shring Association these names and the places associated with them came alive.

Participants in the 2000 Annual Meeting of the United Methodist Historical Society were treated to drama, lecture and reenactments. They were provided with a 300-mile bus tour from Baltimore into Pennsylvania with stops at the Peter Kemp House, Shiremanstown, the Isaac Long Barn and Boehm’s Chapel. Because of the rain and gloomy day a Bi-centennial Service which was scheduled to be held at the Kemp House was moved to Trinity UMC in Frederick, MD.

Along the way, educational “snippets” were provided by tour leaders. Each hosting conference supplied an on-board tour guide and drive-by viewings of many historical sites in the area. Further explanations and biographical information was also provided.

The Annual Meeting was also complemented by lectures. Dr. J. Stephen O’Malley spoke about “United Brethren Missions from 1830.” Milton Loyer took the role of John Fohl in speaking about the UB split. Abram Sangrey presented the “Beginnings in Eastern Pennsylvania” complete with a reenactment of the Otterbein’s greeting to Martin Boehm, “We are Brethren” in 1767 in Long’s Barn.

A paper by John Shildt was read, it was entitled “United Brethren Ecumenism.” Edwin Schell also spoke on the historical Ecumenism of the UB. Bishop James K. Mathews provided a meditation for the morning devotion. This was followed by Dr. K. James Stein, “Church of United Brethren in Christ: a Reluctant Denomination.”

A drama, presented by the Wesley Grove Disciples, entitled “In the Beginning” portrayed the role of the UB leaders “then and now” in the quilt of life in America.

The week was rounded out with food, fun, fellowship and worship. The United Methodist News Service reported that this meeting celebrated the 200th anniversary of the “foundation [being] laid for what has been called the first truly American church.”

Interested in collecting old church records? How about Sunday school pins, commemorative church plates or cookbooks? Try eBay, the Internet auction site. Although not on the formal agenda of the United Methodist Commission on Archives and History at its meeting, the auctioning of church membership and baptismal records surfaced as a concern for some of the agency's directors and staff.

Pins, plates and cookbooks are fair game, it was agreed, but church membership records belong to the church and not to individuals and placing them on the auction block is improper. The situation usually arises in small membership churches where the person in charge of records keeps the materials at home. Eventually they are found by family members clearing out a residence. Purchasers of the records likely are to be involved in genealogy or baptism research. In at least one instance, a commission member, seeing the eBay listings, located the purchaser, who willingly turned the records over. [from UMNS]
