

WHAT IS A SOCIAL IMPACT BOND?

As state and federal budgets may be declining, but the social challenges governments face aren't going away. To fill the gap, policymakers are turning to a new financing mechanism called a social impact bond. It's a public-private partnership designed to deliver ambitious social programs to underserved communities.

WHAT IS A SOCIAL IMPACT BOND?

Since we've been successful in NOT paying our fair share, city, state, and federal budgets are strapped for funding. Little people haven't paid enough taxes to fund needed programs. If we offer to front the cash for these programs, we can cash in. This is a cash cow. If we control the entire process, it's a safe bet that we can cash out handsomely off this scam while feigning real concern for the needy. We'll be heroes. After all, what choice do they

HOW IT WORKS

A community faces a challenge

Make sure to frame the program in such a way that no one can argue against it without seeming insensitive to our benevolent intentions.

The government makes it a priority

We can rely on politicians in our debt campaign contributions to convince communities to participate.

Private investors step up

Billionaires, millionaires, foundations, and corporations decide how much they want to "loan" the government for the program.

A service provider offers a solution

We will do "invest" contracts with local bus

A project manager brings it all together

We give our money to our guy who will manage it as well as the day-to-day operations of the programs.

The provider goes to work

As the program gets underway. We must see to it that we meet the metric in order to profit from this venture.
