Out of respect and fear of Osira's insatiable hunger, even the bravest and most reckless of Captains steer clear of the Eastern coast.

Osira is a massive sea hydra, magically enhanced from her much smaller octopus size when the Maelstrom caused a lightning storm over the waters near Skullrock Island. She is the only one this size of her kind, but this may not be true forever. Sea Hydras are known for their ability to reproduce without a mate every 20 years. It has been much longer than that for Osira, but nobody knows if she has already had offspring that have not yet grown, or if her reproductive cycle extended along with her size.

Osira is a deadly threat to any ships on the Eastern coast, as she has been seen as far North as Zondaras Bay in Veyland, and as far South as the Ghost Coast in Drakkar. She is ruthless and destructive to any who cross her path, and none who have faced her have survived.

Her demise could help prevent dozens more like her from populating the waters of Novus, as they would have to spread out around the world to sustain their feeding needs.
