

Hotel Claude Marbella

SOPHISTICATED AND STYLISH, DISCOVER THE REAL MARBELLA AT HOTEL CLAUDE

Once the summer residence of Empress Eugenia de Montijo (Napoleon III's wife), Hotel Claude Marbella is a 17th-century townhouse that has been revamped and restyled to meld authentic period features with modern design. Setting a new benchmark in the league of beautiful boutique hotels, this chic retreat in the south of Spain takes its name from the late Claude Devoize; the French opera singer who made this townhouse her home back in the 70s and hosted endless soirees and cultural gatherings until the late 80s. The focus of Hotel Claude is its marble flagged patio and its unique romantic roof terrace that overlooks the buzzing old town of Marbella. The seven rooms, divided into six superior deluxe rooms and one suite, have been designed individually to boast their own unique personality, though all come equipped with the latest in comfort and technology. The Suite Francesca is the only room that looks out onto the old town's main street. A large balcony and a huge floor to ceiling window keep it bright and airy while the high, wood-beamed ceilings and decorative arch create a sense of spaciousness. All six superior deluxe rooms are located to the back of the building and overlook neighbouring patios and roofs. Up in the eaves, The Flamand room overlooks the roof terrace and has its own private stairwell that leads up to a smart loft-style studio with glossy oak floors and a semi-open-plan bathroom. From here you can look out over the church's steeple and hear the bells chime you'll feel like a princess in a tower. Savannah and North African-themed Marroquí are joined by a courtyard, making them ideal for families or friends travelling together. Small properties can sometimes feel stifling, but not here, the design incorporates a flurry of velvet, purples, reds and cream colours. Focusing on showing guests a slice of the old Marbella, in addition to the Costa del Sol's beaches and golf courses, those at Hotel Claude make sure you can slow down and enjoy the local area and surroundings. So, once the a la carte breakfast has been served, guests are left to their own devices. You'd be hard-pressed to find a retreat as slick or private as The Claude anywhere else in Marbella.
