Steeping Back Again

June 2 2023

Croteau Racing has announced that it will be take a step back again from racing for a bit. The team will still be at the track helping out the Kenny Racing team. There are some stuff that the team is trying to get worked out currently so not sure as to when we will race again. When asked about this announcement RJ had this to say. “First off we will be stepping back from racing for a bit that includes not racing this weekend. We are currently reviewing some things at the moment and are in the process of hopefully another big announcement shortly but that's all I have to say on the matter at the moment”. This announcement comes shockingly after the team managed to get there first podium after about six years of racing stock cars just two weeks ago. This is all the information we have at this time on the matter as more information comes out we will let you know. You can also stay up to date with the team on Facebook at there team page CroteauRacing.
