This place was awesome! We got seated by the window overlooking the ocean. I got the clam chowder which I loved. We also got the deep fried seafood appetizers. Everything was delicious! We ended up having dessert as well... the waiter brought out the dessert platter and we had to try one. We ended up getting the apple crisp with vanilla ice cream - loved the top portion lol! I'd come back here again.

It is located on the second level, one of the first few restaurants you'll pass by at pier 39.

Came across this place this past Friday when my BF has taken my family around UCI. We parked in the area and my cousin noticed snow monster. After walking around campus we decided to try the place out. I got the passion fruit somethin' with 'monster cloud'. The drink itself is about $5 and the to go glass is an additional $2. The drink was pretty good until I added the cotton candy in it and made it too sweet. It's a great place for drinks, but my BF calls it another 'gimmick'. Can't blame him, I got the glass for pictures lol! The glass were actually pretty cool - not plastic and great size (IMO).

The drinks can get pricey if you get the souvenir glass and the add ons, otherwise the price is pretty average compare to any other boba/tea place. I think it's worth trying out their specialty drinks...

Limitations

- User file includes reviews that are not on the review file
- Difficult to quantify funniness

Conclusion

- Users who get more funny compliments write funnier reviews on average.
- Users who have been yelping longer have funnier reviews

Drawing Back to Yelp

- This even correlation shows that both buttons are used interchangeably or together
- Practice makes perfect. Yelp users who have been posting longer and more frequently get more feedback on their posts.
