As adumbrated in our previous issue (adumbrated was one of my former colleague Peter Botsman's favourite words) we are to elect an Australian poet laureate this issue. PixelPapers is pleased to announce that the sole nominee for poet laureate of Australia was Les Murray. This being the case, we declare him duly elected, at least so far as PP is concerned, and call upon all writers of goodwill to further this nomination by doing something about it whenever within nibbling distance of the ears of one of our masters or mistresses from Canberra. The U.S. Congress provides an office and certain other privileges for their poet laureate.

Jan Bostok has mildly taken me to task for stating that writing is a lonely art and provided us with some reengas to prove it and to show that they have some potential for some literary fun. Have a look in the poetry section for Jan's examples.

We all mix our metaphors on occasion. I must say that I chuckled at a recent Channel 2 news item that described rescuing about ninety whales near Busselton as a mammoth task!

Outside a muffler Shop: No appointment necessary. We hear you coming.

In a veterinarian's waiting room: Be back in 5 minutes. Sit! Stay!

Door of a plastic surgeon's office: We can help you pick your nose!

On a maternity room door: Push. Push. Push.

In a dentist waiting room: Smile your teeth are being watched.

The making of pleasant discoveries by accident

Coming home, I drove into the wrong house and collided with a tree I don't have.

I thought my window was down, but I found it was up when I put my head through it.

The guy was all over the road. I had to swerve a number of times before I hit him.

In an attempt to kill a fly I hit a telephone pole.

An invisible car came from nowhere, struck my car and vanished.

The pedestrian had no idea which direction to run so I ran over him.

My car was legally parked as it backed into the other vehicle.
