When the police arrived I had a client in the hotel room with me.

The officer spoke in English.

She didn't fully understand what he was saying.

Fanny grew more worried as the officer spoke to her client.
One of Fanny's friends working next door could help translate.

The officer had a particular line of questioning:

Are you controlled by a manager?

Who booked the room?

He showed Fanny a photo of an Asian woman on his phone.

That is not me!

I'm not that young!
The officer decided that Fanny was not a 'victim' but an 'illegal migrant'

Fanny was asked to hand her passport over

CBSA (Canadian Border Services Agency) was called

Don’t worry the police won’t be bothering us
Fanny was hand cuffed

Arrested by the police

Not long after Fanny was deported

Between May 2015 to May 2017, 23 migrant sex workers, members of Butterfly were arrested, detained or deported from Canada. These members had their rights and dignity violated, under the name of 'Protect & Rescue' operations of trafficked victims.

Transfered to the CBSA she was detained in an immigration detention facility.
