

L-P-R-C-A in hot water after going against OMB ruling in Long Point

May 10, 2018 07:40 am

More headaches on Hastings Drive in Long Point.

This website uses cookies to ensure you get the best experience on your website.

Learn More

I Accept

But as of last week, members of the Long Point Region Conservation Authority continued to hand out permits to property owners allowing them to build structures.

Norfolk's GM of Development and Cultural Services Chris Baird advised council that is not only against the law, but its by-law department will have to inform people to remove their newly built structures.

Councillor Doug Brunton, who sits on the board at Long Point Region Conservation Authority, said there was some confusion as they felt the old rules would still apply until an official bylaw was worded by the Province.

Baird said the new rules kicked in after the OMB made its ruling on April 16th.

Latest

Privacy Policy | Terms Of Service

Copyright © 2018. All rights reserved.

POWERED BY SoCast Digital growth made easy.

This website uses cookies to ensure you get the best experience on your website.

Learn More