

A Tribute to Veterans

With Veterans Day fast approaching, I feel led to write a brief, heartfelt tribute to all men and women who have served to secure and maintain our nations freedom. I wish to begin the tribute by addressing veterans who may have wondered at some point, was the sacrifice worth the price? Was the time away from family, were missed holidays, birthdays and special occasions, were extreme living conditions and days filled with life threatening danger a worthy price to pay for freedom. For those veterans who may wonder, did my service make a difference, I trust this grateful tribute will be a reassuring blessing. You see, as I write this article, I write from a position of freedom. I write with the freedom to choose words that express personal thoughts and beliefs. I have the freedom to make choices about where I live, work, who I marry and the number of children to too raise. I enjoy the freedom to come and go as I please, and travel where my desire and finances allow. I have freedom to openly gather with fellow believers and worship the one true living Lord Jesus Christ. I cherish the freedom to celebrate holidays, special occasions and milestone accomplishments. I have the freedom to pursue dreams, aspirations and to share them with all who would listen. As I write this tribute from the comfort of my home, while sipping a cup of coffee, watching the day dawn, I realize just how blessed I am to be free. So, to each veteran who has ever wondered, was the sacrifice worth it. To every veteran who has ever questioned, did my service make a difference, the answer is a resounding yes. While I cannot speak for all people, I do believe my thoughts reflect a collective National sentiment. So, on behalf of grateful hearts, on behalf of all who enjoy freedom, thank-you for your service, you've made a profound difference.

Pastor Larry.
