

Do you like to be different? You could be a Hipster

To understand Hipster's subculture is necessary to go back to the 1940s, because all began there. Hipsters appeared as an expression to refer to a jazz fan and their lifestyle. Through the years its definition changed and new millennium Hipster refers to the alternative tendencies leaving aside "Mainstream" that is to say currently popular with most people. However, it is hard to give a precise definition, now that each person has his or her own idea about it.

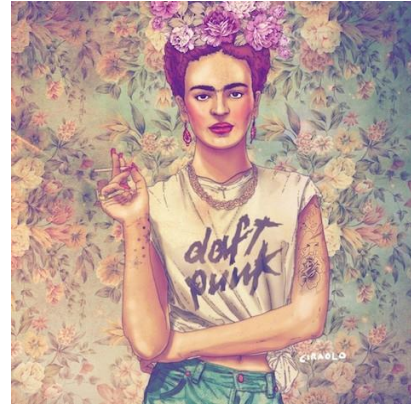

While the hipsters of the '40s found community in jazz music and they developed a language called jive, the modern hipsters are people who want to identify and evaluate something good before the rest of the world knows it. Unlike their predecessors, modern Hipsters belong to the upper class characterized by being elitist and furthermore they will hardly ever admit to be part of the subculture.

Being Hipster is all about image, a key aspect of music, fashion and everything, it is the use of irony and they strive to incorporate it into their clothing. A hipster is who does not create but consumes in the right way, whether eating right food, listening to right music and wearing the right clothes. Christina

Lough, drummer, to say that a hipster is someone who does not create anything original and recycles interests and aesthetics of others to cultivate a personality.

There are different characteristics than define a hipster for example: They choose to wear glasses that they know don't flatter their face just because they're big and despiteful, in the same fashion there are women, wearing crowns of flowers with their outfits as if that is somehow a normal thing human beings do. A hipster generally to judge people for driving and they are part-time DJs, besides, at least one of their profile pictures is they smiling with a group of poor children.

Few people know about hipsters but everybody loves to hate today's hipsters because they're too-cool, they're jerkfaces, they're insecure wannabe sheeple wearing skinny jeans. I think it's very clear that being a hipster today isn't the same as before. Today it's just a fad; is being fashionable, but looking and acting as if you are not, mixing the popular with the intellectual, all coldly calculated.
