EURO '88

With Jack Charlton now leading the Republic of Ireland team and a host of fresh-faced recruits in the squad, there was mixed feelings over whether they could qualify for the UEFA European Championships in Germany. But once the qualifying campaign started it became clear that optimism should replace trepidation.

Still, Ireland were given a scare right at the very beginning in their first qualifying match away to Belgium when Nico Claesen put the home team in front. Although Ireland needed not to worry as they came out of that game with a 2-2 draw and that set the tone for the remainder of the qualifying campaign.

Ireland ended up winning four of their eight games in Group 7 but still needed a late goal from Gary Mackay for Scotland to deny Bulgaria and seal their qualification. It was a huge relief but also a time of incredible celebration as they had just reached their first major international tournament.

Drawn into Group 2, Ireland were first up against England in front of 51,373 spectators in Stuttgart. A goal from Ray Houghton inside six minutes did more than settle nerves for Ireland, it boosted their confidence and gave them belief that they could perhaps finish in the top two in the group.

A 1-1 draw with Soviet Union followed with Ronnie Whelan scoring a memorable goal, but they came up short against Netherlands – losing 1-0 and therefore a point behind the team who eventually go on to win the tournament.

On reflection, the tournament was hugely positive for Ireland as they defied the expectations set for them by outsiders, claimed two hugely impressive results, and introduced a number of players to tournament football which would serve them well for FIFA World Cups that would follow.

EURO '12

The lottery of a draw ceremony can sometimes be cruel and that is exactly what Ireland discovered when they were slotted into Group C with Spain, Italy, and Croatia. It was going to be difficult in each of their three games.

First up was Croatia in Poznan, Poland and an early blow saw Mario Mandzukic put Ireland behind after just three minutes. Sean St Ledger did get a goal back when he reacted quickest inside the penalty area but two more goals for Croatia saw them take the victory.

It didn't get any easier for Ireland after that as they lost 4-0 to eventual champions Spain and then went down 2-0 to Italy. There was disappointment in the results and the performances, but a battling display in all three games was recognized by the Irish supporters who were commended by UEFA.
