

EXPENSIVE SNACK—Trainer Randy Orkisch holds out a mackerel snack for Kaena, a false killer whale at Sea Life Park, Honolulu. Scientists at the park, unable to manufacture food, annually spend $18,000 for fish for Kaena, 12 porpoises, two monk seals, turtles, gooney birds and albatrosses, and hundreds of small fish specimens. The false killer whale is so called because it resembles the killer variety. (AP Wirephoto)

Sea Life Park, pseudorca Kaena & 12 porpoises, 1964

Clipped By:

cetabase

Mon, Sep 19, 2016