Title: Can You Guess My Name? A Riddle/Poetry Game

In this poem,
I give my name,
If you can guess it,
Then play my game.

I did lots of research
And earned my degree
While at Cambridge
University.

I understood the power,
Of electromagnetic waves,
And used my knowledge to build an invention,
Definitely worth some praise.

I invented a radio,
But not like you're used to,
Not like the one,
You play music through

More important than that,
I discovered some things,
They are very small,
And they don't have wings.

They are positive,
From what I have seen,
Because they are deflected from gold foil,
They find other positive things repelling.

I also did some work,
With beta, alpha, and gamma,
Whose parents live only half a life,
From what trends I see in the data.

I speak in earnest,
When I say,
Neglecting of hernias,
Does not cause them to go away.

After I died,
An element was named after me,
You may have heard of Rutherfordium,
In you class of chemistry.
