“LIFT” and “STEP” bills move families with children out of poverty while strengthening Maine’s workforce

Mainers all have a stake in addressing child poverty

The Invest in Tomorrow initiative is driven by a broad network of organizations and individuals across the state who have come together to ensure all Maine families with children can meet their basic needs and have opportunities for good jobs and a brighter future.¹

Today nearly one in eight Maine children is growing up poor.² One out of every five is food insecure, living in families that worry whether they will have enough to eat.³ Child poverty weighs all of us down — it challenges our schools, our health care system, our communities, and our economy.

Mainers all have a stake in addressing child poverty. We all want to see Maine children thrive, and in doing so we can strengthen our families, our communities, and our workforce.

That’s why Invest in Tomorrow supports a bi-partisan bill package that takes meaningful steps to increase security and opportunity for Maine kids:

An Act to Reduce Child Poverty by Leveraging Investments so Families can Thrive (LIFT), sponsored by House Speaker Sara Gideon (D-Freeport) will:

➢ Improve access to the Parents as Scholars (PaS) program by allowing schools to enroll low-income parents so they can get a degree or industry-recognized credential, providing a pathway out of poverty and helping to address Maine’s workforce shortage.

➢ Eliminate the “gross income test” in Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF), which prevents families struggling with poverty from accessing temporary assistance. Right now, a family of three making over $12,276/yr can’t get help from TANF even though they are living far below the poverty level of $21,330/yr. When you lift the gross income test, a family of three making up to $18,780/yr could access this critical support to help meet basic needs and get help finding a job, education, or training.

➢ Establish a Working Group to make improvements at DHHS to help make government accountable to all of us and ensure that programs are working to help LIFT families out of poverty.

Investing in parents transforms families

Allina Diaz is working her way through college as a single mom with three kids in the Parents as Scholars program. Allina can see the change in her daughters as they witness her progress in school: “They are seeing it on a daily basis – that education is important, that loving yourself is important, that valuing yourself is important, having a purpose. That is my goal – to be able to stop that cycle and for them to experience life in a different way than I had to.”

The 2019 poverty level for a family of three is $21,330, however, the mean income deficit for Maine families in poverty was $9,011 in 2017, the year for which the most recent data is available. The mean income deficit is the difference in dollars between household income and a family's poverty threshold. By using the 2017 mean deficit as an approximation, we estimate that the average household income for a Maine family of three below the poverty level is approximately $12,300. Why Invest in Tomorrow Supports LIFT + STEP

Invest in Tomorrow envisions a world in which families can meet their basic needs to thrive and find gainful, sustainable employment, lifting their families out of poverty and setting us all on a better path. To that end, we have identified promising policy solutions like LIFT and STEP that could increase the likelihood that every Maine child gets what they need to have a fair shot at a bright future.
