THE CORONAVIRUS CRISIS

Trudeau announces $82billion in aid amid coronavirus uncertainty

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau announced on Wednesday that the federal government will spend approximately $82 billion amid this coronavirus pandemic. This will include $27 billion in direct support for Canadian workers and businesses.

"These are extraordinary times, our government is taking extraordinary measures," Trudeau said. "The measures we're announcing today will provide up to $27 billion dollars in direct support to Canadian workers and businesses, plus $55 billion to meet liquidity needs of Canadian businesses and households through tax deferrals to help stabilize the economy."

Trudeau said combined, the $82 billion in support represents more than three per cent of Canada's GDP. He went on to predict these economic measures will ensure that Canada's economy rebounds after the pandemic.

"While we are taking a significant step today to help families get through these challenging times, our government is prepared to do more," he said.

The announcement included the following information:

Sickness benefits beyond EI

For Canadians without paid sick leave or access to Employment Insurance sickness benefits, the government is introducing a new Emergency Care Benefit that will provide up to $900 bi-weekly for up to 15 weeks. The benefit, which the government estimates could cost up to $10 billion, is for worker who must self-isolate, those who are caring for a family member sick with COVID-19 and parents who are unable to earn income while schools are closed as a result of childcare duties. The Government says applications for the benefit will be available April 2020.

Unemployment benefits beyond EI

They will also be extending income supports to workers who lose their jobs or see their hours reduced as a result of the pandemic. The Canada Revenue Agency will provide up to $5 billion for unemployed workers without access to EI through a new Emergency Support Benefit.

A Cute Idea From Someone in PG

Hey Neighbours!
Over the next few weeks, many of us will be increasing our time spent at home. If you have young children it can be hard to find things to do all day and not lose your mind.
So I was thinking about a way for our community to still get outside and do something fun, without touching or coughing on each other.
I thought it'd be fun to have a city wide
♥Heart Hunt♥
All you have to do is put a heart in your window ♥
That's it!
Colour it, paint it, cut it out, print it from the printer, whatever.
Then we can get outside, walk around and see how many we can find!
It would be awesome to post pictures of your finds back here.
It's easy.
No human contact. Get fresh air.
Don't buy toilet paper.
Just put a heart in your window

Wage subsidy

To help prevent lay-offs, the government is also eyeing a measure that would provide businesses struggling with the economic impact of COVID-19 with a subsidy equal to 10 per cent of employee wages, up to $1,375 per employee and $25,000 per employer. The wage subsidy could cost an estimated $3.8 billion.

Income supports

Trudeau said Ottawa will also temporarily boost the Canada Child Benefit (CBB) over the coming months. The government is proposing to boost the maximum annual CBB payment amounts by $300 per child for the 2019-2020 benefit year. Families receiving the CBB will get an extra $300 per child as part of their May payment, the government said. Ottawa will also double the maximum annual Goods and Services Tax Credit (GSTC), providing an average income boost of $400 for low-income individuals and close to $600 for couples.

Tax deadline postponed

Ottawa is moving the tax-filing deadline from April 30 to June 1 for individuals, making a similar move that was implemented in the U.S. Canadians who discover they owe taxes will be allowed to postpone payment until August 31.

Moratorium on student loan payments

Trudeau said the government is also proposing a six-month, interest-free moratorium on the repayment of federal student loans.

Help for Canadian businesses

The Canadian government will allow businesses to defer payments of income tax amounts until after Aug. 31. No interest or penalties will accumulate. The government will also increase the tax credits available to small, medium and large businesses. On Monday, Trudeau announced the new Business Credit Availability Program, which will provide more than $10 billion in additional support to businesses through the Business Development Bank of Canada and Export Development Canada.

The federal government said it also plans to "further expand Export Development Canada's ability to provide support for domestic businesses, and provide flexibility on the Canada Account limit, so the government can support Canadian businesses of national interest."

There will also be support for farmers. The government plans to augment the credit available to farmers and the agri-food sector through Farm Credit Canada.

The last part of the announcement says the government will launch an Insured Mortgage Protection Program to purchase up to $50 billion of insured mortgage pools through CMHC. It will do this by raising CMHC's legislative limits to "guarantee securities and insure mortgages by $150 billion each," as said in the release.

The REAL ESTATE market

5 smells home buyers hate

An unpleasant smell can dissuade potential buyers from making a reasonable bid on your home. Here are some odours that are best to eliminate or avoid creating.

1. SMOKE

Many people in the market for a home are put off by properties that smell like cigarette smoke. They may be worried about needing to pay for cleaning, odour removal or restoration services. As a result, they may ask you to factor these costs into the sales price or simply choose to purchase a different home.

2. PET SMELLS

You probably can't smell your pets, but visitors and potential buyers certainly can. Ask your real estate agent if they have any recommendations for good odour removal products and, if you can bear it, consider having your pets stay somewhere else until you sell the house.

3. COOKING ODOURS

While the aroma of freshly baked cookies may help you sell your home, not all food smells are welcome. Avoid cooking strong smelling foods like fish or cabbage shortly before people visit, and try to get any such smells out before the next showing.

4. BLEACH AND OTHER CLEANERS

Never go overboard when using cleaning products. It could give the impression you're trying to hide something. This also goes for air fresheners, which can be overpowering.

5. MOULD OR MILDEW

Musty smells conjure up images of rot and water damage and are sure to deter potential buyers. Check that there are no leaks anywhere in the house and that rooms are well ventilated. In addition, bad smells coming from sinks or drains could mean you need to call a plumber.

If you notice unpleasant smells anywhere in your home, try to locate the source, as they could indicate a problem that needs to be dealt with before putting your house on the market.

Attention: For the faithful parishioners of Our Lady of Peace Parish- Chetwynd.

Due to recent restrictions by Ministry of Health in British Columbia, The Diocese of Prince George has dispensed people from the obligation of attending Sunday until further notice.

Parishioners are encouraged to attend mass via internet and television. Vision TV broadcasts masses daily and also streams them on YouTube.

Our parish priest will continue to do his duty in saying Mass privately and fulfilling other Sacraments in a restricted routine for the intentions of the parishioners and everyone who has been affected by the virus
