Anti Vaxxers Beware, Mandatory Vaccinations Cross Province for Students

B.C. Health Minister Adrian Dix says the province will require parents to register their children's immunization records at school by the fall, with all students in both public and private schools required to provide proof of up to date immunizations.

The main goal of vaccination registration is to provide education to parents about vaccines and how they have been proven successful in eradicating diseases.

More than 6000 suspension orders will go out to students in Waterloo, Ontario over vaccines. Parents will have until March 26 to provide proof of immunization or a valid exemption to avoid suspension, which can last up to 20 days. Dix has said B.C.'s model will closely follow Ontario's immunization program for children attending school.

This is what B.C. parents can expect when mandatory immunization reporting takes effect:

- Before the school year begins, parents will need to gather their child's immunization records either from their physician or public health.
- Immunization records will be submitted to the school, likely with the usual registration records as the school year begins. That information will be forwarded to public health and entered into the registry.
- If a particular immunization is missing, parents will be advised to follow up with their public health unit or physician to get their child up to date.
- There will likely be a grace period for students who are not caught up with their required immunizations.
- If a parent wants their child exempt based on their personal beliefs, they will require a notarized form that outlines that parents understand the potential consequences of their child not being immunized.
- Exemptions will likely be allowed for valid medical reasons, like allergic reactions, and those will be reviewed by a medical health officer.
- Suspensions for non-compliance are likely.

Basically, exemptions will exist for children who cannot receive vaccines due to medical reasons. If a parent does not want a child to receive an immunization because of "philosophical reasons", Dix says they "would have to go through a process to state that."

Recently, B.C. has seen a substantial increase in the number of people who have been vaccinated. There have been 13 confirmed cases of measles reported so far in this outbreak in Vancouver. But fortunately this actually is a small fraction compared to other recent measles outbreaks including the 343 reported cases in 2014 and another 87 cases in 2010.

HAVE WE FORGOTTEN HOW TO EAT TOGETHER?

Kids eat together on the playground, and college students dine in shared dorm rooms, but as we get older and take on day jobs, are we still eating together?

Apparently, not so much. A recent national survey commissioned by President's Choice found that although Canadians spend significantly less time eating meals with friends and family compared to screen time, there is still a desire to spend more time at the table.

With technology becoming more accessible than ever and permeating our everyday lives, it's important we take the time to put down our devices and re-connect with those around us. Research has shown on average, almost one in three of us are spending more than four hours of our free time engaging with screens each day.

The simple act of regularly sharing a meal with friends and family can contribute to a beneficial lifestyle, including healthier eating habits, early childhood development, and stronger interpersonal relationships.

In fact, for the first time since its inception, Canada's most recent food guide released earlier this year encourages us to cook more often and eat meals with others in an effort to instill healthy eating habits.

"The act of eating together is very simple, yet the positive impacts are significant," says Uwe Stueckmann, senior vice president at Loblaw Companies. "We know that moments and memories are created while sharing meals together, conversations are created with our children, healthier meals are eaten, and we leave the table happier and more connected with the ones we love."

3 TIPS TO SPRING CLEAN YOUR ROUTINE

Tossing those items that don't spark joy isn't the only thing you should be thinking about. Here are three simple things you can do to tidy up and refresh your routine to save time and money:

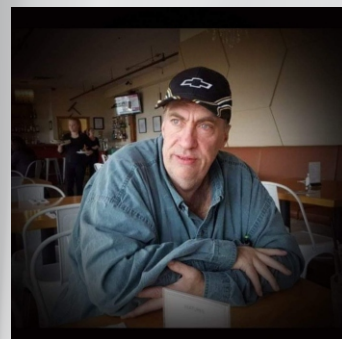

Do a little every day. Don't let dirty dishes and laundry pile up.

Lessen your to-do lists by doing a little every day. Those routine chores won't seem so overwhelming if you put in that ounce of effort each day. Best of all, your free time is going to be a lot more enjoyable without those chores weighing on your conscience.

Stay on top of finances. Take advantage of promotions at your favourite retailers and leverage rewards programs for points that you can redeem on items you need, saving room to splurge on some of the things you want.

Streamline your grocery shopping. Going without a game-plan is a rookie mistake. While lists are helpful, take things one step further by ordering items ahead online and leveraging grocery pick-up programs to eliminate extra time in-store. Finding ways to save on these services, like through the new PC Insiders subscription, will hold the fee and help you rack up the points on your next shop.
