TRANSFORM YOUR HOME THIS SUMMER WITH THESE FEW SIMPLE TIPS

Window coverings- shades, sheers, blackout curtains, or blinds, there are so many ways to help block the sun from heating up your home in the day, and preventing peeping eyes in the evening. But window coverings can be functional and make a statement in your home as well they're one of the quickest ways to update a room and give it the feel you're wanting. Whether it's a bedroom, living room, or family room, you can use colours, textures and patterns to help create the vibe you're wanting for your space. The best way to go about choosing new window coverings is to take into account the patterns and colours you're working with already with your furniture or bed. Try not to overwhelm the space with a clash of too many colours or patterns; stick to solid colours if you want to incorporate a pattern to your windows or vice versa. A patterned bedspread? Match it with a solid colour for your curtain!

Greenery- not only do having plants in your home make for a fresh natural feel, having plants can also help reduce carbon dioxide and other pollutants as well as reduce airborne dust.

Artwork- A great way to change up the decor in your home is to add some fresh artwork. There are a bunch of great local artists to help support if that's your thing, but if you're an avid picture taker like myself, you can take one of your awesome shots you took and blow it up on canvas. Walmart, Costco or even online companies like Shutterfly let you create your own prints.

Add depth to your space by adding architectural interest to your wall- you could make a feature wall with a pattern using painters tape delicately placed and painted over, removing the tape after to reveal the pattern. You could also go a step further by covering a wall with distressed wood in a variety of stained colours, even adding in the odd white piece. The best tip for this is to properly stagger your pieces. Another idea is to add moulding to the wall, either just the bottom half with a wainscoting look or the entire wall with a box feel. Use 1x4 wood strips and then paint the entire thing in a light shade for a fresh feel.

You don't have to spend a fortune revamping your home, work with one space at a time. Your home is forever evolving, with the seasons and with your personal growth. Let your creativity flow and happy renovating!

Students in graduate-level degree programs at the University of British Columbia (UBC) will be able to focus more intently on research and innovation because of a $6-million scholarship fund that will also help recruit and retain the province's brightest minds.

"Graduate students at UBC are pushing the boundaries of research, while improving the quality of life for all British Columbians," said Melanie Mark, Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training. "This long overdue investment in scholarships will help recruit and retain more graduate talent, so we can build the best B.C. for everyone."

The merit-based graduate student scholarship funding from government will be administered by UBC, making 400 awards of $15,000 each available for eligible domestic students. UBC is also leveraging this provincial funding to encourage donors to support graduate students. Donors will be invited, under UBC's Blue & Gold fundraising campaign, to add their own donations to benefit graduate students in Vancouver and the Okanagan.

"The University of British Columbia is an integral partner in developing the highly skilled graduates, and research, that our tech and innovation sector relies on to continue thriving and expanding B.C.'s economy," said Bruce Ralston, Minister of Jobs, Trade and Technology. "Our $6-million scholarship investment will directly help grad students, so they can spend more energy focused on their innovative research."

The graduate scholarships are research focused, with an emphasis on science, technology, engineering and mathematics, as well as professional, Indigenous and regional programs.

Graduate students at UBC and throughout the province are creating new knowledge and finding solutions to pressing real-world challenges.

In October 2018, Matthew Noestheden, a UBC Okanagan PhD student, developed a new test to detect wildfire-tainted wine grapes, helping wine producers better manage their crops during the wildfire seasons. New research from Christine Ou, a nursing PhD student at UBC's Vancouver campus, is looking to help women during their postpartum period by identifying anger as an often-overlooked feature of postnatal mood disorders.

The scholarships reflect B.C.'s commitment to true, lasting reconciliation with Indigenous peoples through implementing recommendations made by the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and Calls to Action by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission. Eligible Indigenous graduate students will be supported in the graduate student scholarship program.

Potpourri. noun. A mixture of dried petals and spices used to perfume a room; a stew made of different kinds of meat, none of which may be caribou; a composition of unrelated thoughts. This week you get a potpourri of bits and pieces, here a little, there a little, of information and ideas requiring some thought on my part and a little on yours. No! Contrary to popular opinion based on empirical visual evidence (so, how could we be wrong? Right?), they are not dead. They look dead; I agree with you who agree with me. I thought they were dead just like many of you thought. I've been urging Administration to have them replaced forthwith with living beings. But, according to expert opinion, I am wrong, again. They've been victimized by the Cottony Psyllid (Psyllopsis discrepans). Belonging to the family of insects sometimes called jumping plant lice, leaping over the sea, they have come to us from Europe. Next year the District of Chetwynd will have to ambush the little blighters before they can do their thing again. This year we'll call it a near-death experience with the light at the end of the tunnel, the only assurance that it doesn't have to happen again. We've learned our lesson, how to protect our trees against the pest. Oh, yes, the trees that have been hit in the boulevard are Manchurian Ash, a favorite of the jumping plant lice. But, contrary to visual perception, our Manchurian Ash are still living.

Conuma Coal is continuing to prosper and to share its prosperity with its neighbours. On July 9 the District of Chetwynd received another CA$30,000 for a sweet total of CA$230,000 since Conuma started operating the Wolverine and Brule Mines. You will be delighted to be reminded that these dollars have been placed in a special fund for special projects yet to be decided by Council. Willow Creek mine is being ramped up for production as you read this bit of literature. We take this opportunity to thank Conuma management and shareholders for their visionary approach to harvesting the natural resources of our region. We have also noted with appreciation the human resource, safety, and environmental measures Conuma is taking to ensure as far as humanly possible a long and productive life for the mines and an extended period of relative security for families and communities associated with them.

Seniors are a blessed treasure of the community experience. Happily, we have our share of them and they have their share of challenges (other than by lasting into that level of maturity, how does one get to be a senior?) Thanks to the generosity of Russ Young and his donation of crushed limestone to the Seniors' horseshoe pits and the contribution of District labour, tossing the horseshoes over the pins is once again a source of time-passing pleasure for seniors and aspiring seniors.

I think it was last week that I casually mentioned the work our District staff was doing on the flood-prevention front. This week I am free to tell of the $700,000+ grant Chetwynd just received to be applied to very practical measures professionally designed to reduce the level of water in our cross-community streams during future heavy-rain events (that will strike us later – or sooner). Our thanks are due to our government departments that recognize a well-crafted proposal and respond in a timely manner. Work has already commenced on the design phase.

Those of you who must travel on 47th Ave. will be relieved to learn that IDL is making steady progress on the sewer project down under. Some challenges, not unexpected, involving more ground water than desirable have been encountered but the arm-chair politicians in our midst will be glad (or not) to learn that the project is on time and on budget at this stage.

While the thought of budgets is still on your minds: the water-treatment project has come in significantly under budget so we are asking the Ministry for permission to use excess funds to upgrade the high-lift water station electrical equipment, a part of the Water Treatment Plant system. Maybe; maybe no; we'll see. In either case, we are more than thankful for the support we continue to get from our senior governments.

And keep watch for the date of the ribbon cutting for the Water Treatment Plant to be announced sometime in August. Plan to join us.

Oh, by the way, here is a word for the pushers, the drivers, the strivers, the climbers: "know your limits – then ignore them" (John Mason).

BACK TO SCHOOL IN 1 MONTH

Not that I need to remind some of the parents that are counting the days until summer break is over, but were at the halfway point which means in the next few weeks we will be collecting last year's school gear inventory and making our list of what we need this year. But on top of new school clothes, back packs, inside runners, and lunch bags, what else should we be doing to help prepare for the upcoming school year?

Kids need proper adjusting to be able to perform at their best and not feel the stresses of the first few weeks back to the books. The best way to help our younger kids prepare for the upcoming school year is to help them slowly return to the schedule and structure of a school week. This means cutting back late nights on weekdays and begin reintroducing specific times when they should read or write stories, draw pictures or sort and organize their school supplies, if they don't already do this throughout the summer...

Set up a homework space for your older kids. Let them help you create an area that they will be able to do their homework without the distraction of TV or social media. A spot in a common area like the living or dining room works best from some kids, for others their bedroom is their comfort zone. See what works best for your kid and work with them to create a space they will feel inspired to finish their assignments.

A dry erase wall calendar is a great way to keep organized with appointments, extra curricular activities and other important dates. If your household is really busy, consider using different colours to differentiate each person's responsibilities.

The best way to cut down on the stresses of back to school is to be prepared. Whatever that means to you, whether it is a full day scheduler for each child or more of the natural approach of slowly reintroducing structure. The thought is that the more prepared a child feels on their first day back to school, the less stress Mom, Dad and the kids will have.

It is said that, in 1941 the Ford motor company produced an experimental automobile with a plastic body composed of 70% cellulose fibres from hemp. The car body could absorb blows 10 times as great as steel without denting. The car was designed to run on hemp fuel. Because of the ban on both hemp and alcohol, the car was never mass produced.
