Remembrance Day

LEST WE FORGET

Remembrance Day has been recognized in Canada since 1931. However, the occasion was initially known as Armistice Day, and was exclusively a celebration of the end of World War I. Here's what Remembrance Day is all about today and how you can celebrate it.

Remembrance Day is celebrated annually on November 11 to honour the contributions of all military service members who gave their lives defending our nation. Similar commemorative events, such as Decoration Day in June and Paardeberg Day in February, were held before World War I. However, the scale of the Great War and the extensive human cost incurred by the conflict led to the adoption of a single celebration.

Canada's armed forces have since been involved in a number of conflicts, including World War II, the Korean War, the Gulf War and the war in Afghanistan, as well as a long list of peacekeeping operations across the globe. Veterans of these wars are likewise honoured on Remembrance Day.

Here are some ideas to help honour our veterans and their bravery:

- Wear the poppy over your heart
- Observe two minutes of silence at 11 a.m. on November 11
- Attend a Remembrance Day ceremony in your region
- Speak with veterans, or listen to interviews with them
- Learn more about Canada's memorial monuments
- Visit a war museum or memorial in your region
- Learn more about Canada's involvement in a conflict, peacekeeping mission or humanitarian effort

To learn more about Remembrance Day visit www.veterans.gc.ca.

TRANSFORM ANY ROOM INTO A HOME THEATRE

Winter is made for curling up inside to watch a good movie or tv show. And when you're in hibernation mode, it's nice to have a dedicated place for binge-watching. Here are some tips to create your very own theatre at home:

Minimize ambient disruptions. You don't need to do a major remodel, but a few changes can help cut out distracting sounds and light. Try choosing a space that's naturally darker like your basement, or you can fake it with room-darkening or blackout blinds. When it comes to eliminating noise, softer materials can make a big difference – add an area rug, throw pillows and lush curtains.

Plan for proper viewing. For a comfortable experience, consider some rules of thumb for viewing and seating distances. The distance from your tv should be 1.5 to 2.5 times the diagonal width of the screen, and it's best to have the centre of the screen at eye level. If you're buying a new tv, use this formula to see how big you can go before it starts to get overwhelming.

Get the right media stand. You don't want a multitude of cables cluttering up your home theatre, so look for a cabinet that has space for cable management. If you still have a Blu-ray or DVD player, make sure there's space for it too. If most of your content comes via the internet, plan for your Wi-Fi router to be nearby. It's also important that your electronics are well ventilated, as they can heat up when in use. A power strip with built-in surge protection can be a cost effective way to protect your high-tech toys.

Quick Facts

This is the first Apprenticeship Recognition Month in British Columbia; previously, it was celebrated as Apprenticeship Week.

There are nearly 39,000 apprenticeships:

10% of apprentices are women.

8% of apprentices are Indigenous.

There are more than 6,900 youth trades program participants.

B.C. is home to over 100 trades, 51 of which are nationally recognized Red Seal.

ITA expects to fund over 21,000 apprenticeship training seats this year at public and private institutions.

Since 2018, ITA has signed eight memoranda of understanding with Indigenous organizations across the province to increase training and employment opportunities in their home communities.

In November, ITA's first Director of Women in Trades will be supporting the increase of women in under-represented trades.

In 2018/19, the province invested $3 million in industry-standard training equipment to give trades and tech students the skills they need to succeed.

In the next decade, we expect about 71,000 job openings in the trades. These careers are good-paying and long-lasting family supporting jobs. Our government values the trades people who keep our lights on, our homes warm, and our cars running. We are focused on opening doors for apprentices while breaking down barriers and creating opportunities for women, Indigenous people, and other underrepresented groups to join our thriving economy.

CONFIDENCE IS KEY WHEN HITTING THE ROADS THIS WINTER

Whether we like it or not, the cold weather is here, which likely means overeating during the holidays, bundling up and, inevitably, harsher winter road conditions. To ensure you make the best of the season's extreme and unpredictable road conditions, here we distinguish fact from fiction when it comes to the biggest winter driving myths.

First and foremost, it's essential to equip your car with four high-quality winter tires. Contrary to common belief, all-season tires are not up to handling severe winter conditions of heavy ice or snow. Once the temperature consistently approaches freezing, winter tires are encouraged in all provinces in Canada and mandatory in Quebec by December 1st.

"Third-party testing for snow braking showed that a winter tire stops on average 35 per cent shorter than the average of several of our all-season tires. The rubber compound found in some of our winter tires provide the added grip, traction and flexibility needed when it comes to tackling snow and ice."

Another common myth is that four-wheel-drive vehicles are safer, which is incorrect. Four-wheel-drive does provide optimized power transmission delivery, but minimal assistance in transverse handling and braking situations. With winter tires, you can feel optimized levels of traction during all maneuvers including acceleration, braking, and handling.

While winter tires are built with safety in mind, drivers must also prepare for the unexpected by getting ahead of seasonal road changes, making sure winter tires are in perfect condition and ensuring never to mix new and used tires with varying wear and tread depth, which can significantly impact the stability and performance of both tires and vehicle.
