First Legal 420 Celebration

I think many people were in the same boat this year wondering if April 20th (4:20) would be a celebration, or still considered a protest. Well the Herby Hippy Chick owner April Barnetson and The Herbal Goose's Kelly Smith were set up out front of the Herby Hippy Chic store in Chetwynd this past Saturday, celebrating. Along with the celebration, Kelly also was informing passers by of a few common misconceptions about legal marijuana through little quiz, with the prize being a rolled joint.

One common misconception is that you can not travel with marijuana in your vehicle. This is untrue, you can drive around with open marijuana containers as long as they are out of reach of the driver. Another misconception is that you cannot mail marijuana, again this is not true. You wouldn't want to put a joint in an envelope and send it, but sealed containers are safe for mailing throughout Canada. Some people may also be unaware of the fines for smoking up in an unregulated public area, which can be up to $230, but vaping is only $58, go figure that one!

4:20 celebrations seem to be gaining traction. This year in Vancouver, they recorded the most amount of people to partake, in history!

If you are a recreational user, make sure to inform yourself of the rules and keep up to date on regulations and your rights. Visit the government website to read up on all laws pertaining to recreational pot use.

How cigarette smoke impacts your home's resale value

Did you know that smoking is not only bad for your health but that it can also decrease your home's resale value?

Studies show that smoking cigarettes inside your home seriously affects your property's worth. In a 2013 study by Pfizer Canada, 88 per cent of the approximately 400 real estate agents surveyed said that it's more difficult to sell a home where smokers live. Nearly half said that smoking affects a home's resale value, and about one third said that it lowers a property's value by as much as 29 per cent.

The damage caused by cigarette smoke can discourage potential buyers from purchasing your home and lead appraisers to devalue your property. Residue from the smoke stains walls, floors and ceilings, and the smell is extremely difficult — and costly — to get rid of.

Not only are the grime and smell unappealing to buyers, but thirdhand smoke (the residue from secondhand smoke containing nicotine and other harmful chemicals) is carcinogenic and can remain lodged in dust and on surfaces for more than two months after smokers have moved out. Exposure to thirdhand smoke can be harmful for your health and is especially dangerous for children.

If you're a smoker and a homeowner, think twice before lighting up inside; the habit may be hurting not only your health but also the market value of your home.

Pouce Coupe Volunteer Fire Department To Burn Hillcrest Cottages

The Pouce Coupe Volunteer Fire Department will be conducting a controlled structural fire training exercise by burning Hillcrest cottages this weekend. This decision came at the April 17th council meeting, due to years of struggling with crime rates and declining property values nearby. As reported by Dawson Creek Mirror, four small cottages at the Hillcrest property at 5205 50th Avenue and 5211 Hospital Road will be burned this weekend so long as weather permits.

Village officials say that the building inspector has inspected the buildings and there are no public safety issues.

Residents with questions can call the Village Office at 250-786-5794

Canfor announces more curtailments in Peace

Canfor Corporation has announced more temporary curtailments at all dimension mills in BC due to low lumber prices and the high cost of fibre.

In an email to Peace FM, Director of Corporate Communications Michelle Ward confirmed that all of the sawmills in the Peace Region will be curtailed for one week, commencing on April 29th.

Canfor has 13 sawmills in Canada, with a total annual capacity of about 2.8 billion board feet. The curtailment will reduce the company's production output by approximately 100 million board feet.

Talking to your teen about vaping

Teens and smoking. It's not something we like to discuss, but it's something we need to prevent. If your child took up smoking, you'd want to take immediate action to protect them from the harmful, addictive product. But what if they started vaping?

At first glance, vaping can seem harmless, especially if you're not familiar with the device. It doesn't smell like cigarette smoke—in fact, some of the flavours might smell good. But underneath the benign exterior lie risks.

Make sure your teen has what they need to make healthy choices by discussing the topic with them, frankly and honestly.

Educate yourself. Nothing can undermine your parental authority like your kids realizing they know more about the topic than you. Take the time to learn the facts about vaping: Canada.ca/vaping.

Nicotine and youth. Most teenagers—and their parents—don't realize many e-liquids used for vaping contain nicotine. The addictive drug is especially harmful to young people. It can affect teen brain development, while hooking them at the same time.

Toxic chemicals. Vaping can expose you to harmful chemicals like formaldehyde and acrolein. In addition, some metal particles like nickel, tin and aluminum can be found in vaping products. Because the long-term health effects of vaping are unknown, why risk putting any of these substances in your lungs?

Be ready for questions. You can present facts to your kids, and if you're lucky they might even listen! But the harder part comes next, when they start asking tough questions from their own experiences. You need to be calm and understanding. Your kids need to feel comfortable asking you about vaping, and safe telling you if they've experimented with it.

Kids can have a hard time believing grown-ups, especially their parents, are on their side. It won't be enough to tell them you are. You have to show them. Open up to your kids, let them open up to you, and what happens next will surprise everyone.

Lekstrom Working Hard as Liason

Blair Lekstrom has been bust since his appointment as community liaison on the caribou agreements by Premier John Horgan. As reported by the Dawson

Creek Mirror, he plans to meet with the Peace River Regional District, First Nations, industry, the Concerned Citizens for Caribou Recovery and elected provincial and federal representatives as well as responding to all the queries from the public. Lekstrom believes that this is a above politics, and is quoted saying "This to me is a non-political issue, it's one that I live here, my family lives here, my grandchildren, my friends, and as I've said a 100 times before, we're all in this together, so definitely I want to try and make this work. When any one of our communities is impacted in a negative way, we all feel it."
