CROP CIRCLES

Many crop formations are not just pretty pictures. Some, when studied closely, have been found to contain complex mathematical equations and even coded messages. In May 2010, a crop circle that appeared in Wiltshire, England, was said to contain "Euler's Identity"—"the most beautiful and profound mathematical equation in the world." Two years earlier, only a small distance away at Barbary Castle, another crop circle had appeared. When an American astrophysicist saw it in a newspaper, he promptly claimed the formation represented the first 10 digits of pi.

FASINATING CROP CIRCLES

Two of the most intriguing crop formations appeared in a field opposite the Chilboton Observatory in 2001. One appeared to be a face, but the other was even stranger. It appeared to be a replica of a binary radio signal sent out into the universe by a team of astronomers led by Carl Sagan in 1974—the Arecibo message. When studied closely, however, parts of the binary had been altered. Instead of information about humans and our solar system, the startling crop formation appeared to be a reply with information about someone else's genetic makeup and star system. Alien enthusiasts hailed this as proof of alien existence, while most treated it much more skeptically. Incidentally, declassified NSA documents concerning the monitoring of replies from the Arecibo message revealed that a total of 29 replies were received. Make of that what you will.

In summer of 1996 at Stonehenge in England, a crop circle was said to have formed almost in front of bewildered motorists and visitors. Named "The Julia Set," this particular formation was able to have its arrival pinned down to a specific rather than approximate time, with the analysis showing it took at most only an hour to form. A small aircraft pilot flying overhead reported that both he and his passenger could attest the field was "as normal" at 5:30 that afternoon, but by 6:15 PM when he was flying back over the field on his return flight, the formation had now appeared.

Fifteen minutes later, cars were lining the side of the normally busy road so drivers could glimpse the mysterious pattern. Researcher Lucy Pringle spoke to several of the people at the roadside. Some claimed to have witnessed the arrangement being formed as a "swirling cloud of mist" spun its way around the field.

Goat gymnasts – the goats of Tamri village in Morocco show great agility in searching for their favourite food. These nimble nibblers claw, jump and scramble up the argan trees to reach their beloved berries, setting in motion a practice that's been around for centuries. The olive-like argan berry is perfect nourishment in an area where food is scarce. The Tamri goats can climb 9 m (30 ft) up to the tree tops.

SALTS NURSERY'S CLOSURES AFTER OVER 30 YEARS

The Salts closed the doors today finishing their last season as one of Chetwynd's favourite flower nurseries. The Salt family have been adding colour to our gardens for over 30 years, opening every spring just after Mother's Day. Frank and Audrey Salt moved to Chetwynd in 1970 and Frank worked as a coal miner. They began by having the greenhouse nursery as a part time business in the late 1980s. But after retiring they began working at the nursery full time. Over the years they acquired the help of their daughters Jackie, Julie, Joanne and Jeanette and even some grandkids.

Their attention to detail brought customers back each and every year, sometimes even bringing the family treats and gifts.

"It has been a pleasure seeing all the new generations of gardeners throughout the years and we want to thank our customers. We wish you well in your future gardening endeavours. Keep it blooming!" - The Salt family.

Thank you, Salt family, for the 3 decades of helping our northern green thumbs fill their gardens with beautiful flowers and hearts with joy.
