TRINIDAD DRILLING FINED AFTER WORKER SUFFERED SERIOUS BURNS IN ACCIDENT

WorkSafeBC has fined Trinidad Drilling $75,000 in the wake of a 2012 accident in which one of their employees in Fort St. John sustained serious burns.

The victim of the on-site incident was working in the mixing shack of a natural gas well when a hose on a pressure relief line broke.

This resulted in "volatile drilling fluid" spraying onto the worker, soaking his fire-retardant clothing, and the rig. A flash fire then ignited and the worker sustained serious burns.

The investigation that followed found rig setup instructions for the high-pressure piping were inadequate, according to WorkSafeBC.

They also say the flexible hose was too long and of too small a diameter – a direct violation of the Occupational Health and Safety Regulation.

"The firm failed to ensure the health and safety of its own and other workers at the workplace," according to the WorkSafeBC ruling.

The fine comes just over one week after a Calfrac Well Services employee was killed in an accident at a Progress Energy well site that also reportedly involved a rupturing hose.
