Phoenix Rising

I am the Phoenix Rising from the ashes and taking in the glorious fresh air of life. Staring death in the face up close and personal has given me a new perspective. I treasure the simplest of things... a friend's smile, the lengthening gap between my Oncologist visits, the words "How was your day today Ma Bear?" and my trusty laptop.

As with most things computer, I am self-taught.... Scary thought I know....

The first time my "IT guru" tried to help me with one of my many computer issues over the phone was confusing to say the least. He was and still is very patient with me and was saying things like; "go to the top of the tree on the left" or "you'll find it in the root directory" and "somewhere in the middle of the pull down menu"...

Basically, I had no idea what he was talking about..... he may as well have been giving me directions to some fancy new restaurant in the middle of a hidden rainforest for all I knew.

Yes I know some of you might say my Blog has been a long time coming and why didn't you do it sooner I hear more of you ask.... but let's face it I had no bloody idea how to go about it and have had much more important things on my plate demanding my full and utter attention for the last couple of years.

Now is absolutely perfect timing for me & my blog....
