

Our Mission

Detroit Feedback Loop is a Wayne State student organization that aims to relieve hunger in Detroit by collecting leftover, unused food from local restaurants and redistributing it to community soup kitchens and homeless shelters. In addition to benefiting those in need, we are reducing the negative impact food waste has on the environment. This simple model is effective and has potential to create local involvement from students, residents, and business owners to “loop” unused food back to the community.

What we accept:

Leftover prepared food from restaurants or events, fresh produce, safe to eat grains such as breads or rice, canned food, etc. Please contact us for any questions regarding what can be donated.

Who we donate to:

Detroit Rescue Mission, Coalition on Temporary Shelter, and more.

Steps for donating food:

1. If your business has leftover food, text or email us (see contacts below)
2. Let us know the quantity and a pick-up time that works best for you
3. We will send volunteers to collect and weigh the food donation
4. We will transport the food to the charitable organization
5. We will keep a log of the date, donor restaurant, where the food was donated, and the amount of food saved.

Note: If we are not able to transport the food the day of, we ask that the business keep the donated food refrigerated until we can pick it up the following day.
