Cherry Blossom: In February, we got to spend some much needed time outside. We had a few warm days and got to go on some walks around the neighborhood. We have been talking a lot about colors, even matching our clothes and toys to the hearts on the floor. We dyed chick peas and loved exploring those. It was fun picking out the different colors. We did cookie cutter paintings, made homemade ice cream, did silhouette dot painting, and practiced pre-writing tracing lines. We have had a huge blossom in our language skills, there is so much more communication happening between the kiddos now. We made Sam's day having a space lesson. We brought in a space shuttle, did a solar system floor puzzle, and went on "field trips" to outer space. We also celebrated Noah's and Emry's 2nd birthdays and look forward to celebrating Abram's. It's been a busy short month and we look forward to many more fun activities.
