Tobacco Road

Originally, “Tobacco Road” was the title of a 1932 Erskine Caldwell novel about poor, rural sharecroppers in Georgia. But it was North Carolina – not Georgia – that was the center of the tobacco industry, and before long Caldwell’s pejorative term began to refer to certain college athletics programs that blossomed like a tobacco leaf in the Carolina soil. Within the past twenty years or so, the designation has often been specifically utilized in reference to the Duke/UNC basketball matchup, a rivalry which many sports fans regard as the most iconic and most storied in all of collegiate athletics. While some will instantly recognize the reference, others will be curious to discern its hidden meaning. In any event, there is no name more perfect than Tobacco Road for an Atlantic Coast Conference (ACC) style bar located in the heart of Chicago.

Tap Room

In preparation for opening the bar, the founders did some ‘R&D’ in the form of a road trip (aptly named Tobacco Road Trip), during which they visited all fifteen ACC schools in just fifteen days. The goal of the 3,500 mile journey was to discover authentic food and drink on each campus in order to build the Tobacco Road menu organically. Luckily the founders were able to do just that. Welcome to Tobacco Road Tap Room, and we hope you enjoy your taste of the Atlantic Coast!
