THE BOOK OF COLOSSIANS

Introduction

Colossians is perhaps the most Christ-centered book in the Bible. In it Paul stresses the preeminence of the Person of Christ and the completeness of the salvation He provides.

Author

The external testimony to the Pauline authorship of Colossians is ancient and consistent. The internal evidence is also very good; it not only claims to have been written by Paul (1:1, 23; 4:18), but the personal details and close parallels with Ephesians and Philemon strengthen the case.

Nevertheless, the authenticity of this letter has been challenged on the ground of vocabulary and thought. In its four chapters, Colossians uses fifty-five Greek words that do not appear in Paul’s other epistles. The high Christology of Colossians has been compared to John’s later concept of Christ as the Creator Logos (1:15–23; cf. John 1:1–18), with the conclusion that these concepts were too late for Paul’s time. Also, it is sometimes argued that the Colossian heresy is a type of Gnosticism prevalent in the second-century A.D.

We must recognize, however, that Paul commanded a wide vocabulary, and the unique topics addressed in this letter, particularly the Colossian heresy, account for the vocabulary of the epistle. In addition, there is no reason to assume that Paul was unaware of Christ’s work as Creator, especially in view of Philippians 2:5–11. Finally, the information regarding the Colossian heresy in chapter 2 points rather to what was probably an early form of Gnosticism, rather than full-fledged Gnosticism of the second century variety.

Date

Paul wrote this epistle from prison, as he did Ephesians, Philippians, and Philemon. Although Caesarea and Ephesus have been suggested as possible locations of authorship, the bulk of evidence suggests that Paul wrote it in A.D. 60 or 61 during his first Roman imprisonment (Acts 28:16–31) and sent it with Tychicus and the converted slave Onesimus to Colosse (4:7–9; cf. Eph 6:21; Philem. 10–12).

Colosse was a minor city about one hundred miles east of Ephesus in the region of the seven Asian churches of Revelation 1–3. Located in the fertile Lycus Valley on the road from Ephesus to the east, Colosse had previously been a populous center of commerce, but by the time of Paul it had been eclipsed in importance by the neighboring cities of Laodicea and Hierapolis. Apart from this letter, Colosse exerted almost no influence on early church history.

The precise character of the Colossian heresy has been a matter of debate. The nature of this heresy can only be deduced from Paul’s incidental references to it in his refutation in 2:8–23. It was apparently a religious system that combined elements from Hellenistic Greek speculation (2:4, 8–10), Jewish legalism (2:11–17), and Oriental mysticism (2:18–23). It involved a low view of the body (2:20–23) and probably of nature as a whole. With its stress upon the importance of circumcision, dietary regulations, and ritual observances, together with its worship of angels and preoccupation with mystical experiences, the Colossian heresy denied the sufficiency of Christ, and any attempt to fit Christ into such a system would undermine His Person and redemptive work.
Themes and Literary Structure

The resounding theme in Colossians is the preeminence and sufficiency of Christ in all things. The believer is complete in Him alone and lacks nothing because “in Him dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily” (2:9). The first part of the epistle is an exposition of Christ’s supremacy (chs. 1–2); the second part explains the implications of Christ’s supremacy in terms of the believer’s submission to Christ the Lord (chs. 3–4).

Particularly in the second half of the epistle, Paul explores the implications of the believer’s union with Christ. The believer’s union with Christ in His death, resurrection and exaltation is the foundation upon which earthly life must be built (3:1–4). Because of their death with Christ, Christians must regard themselves as dead to the old way of sin (3:5–11); because of their resurrection with Christ, believers must regard themselves as alive to Him in righteousness and must put on the new qualities that are prompted by Christian love (3:12–17).

The new life in Christ is to be manifested in the personal relationships of the Christian. Paul provides specific instructions for husbands and wives, children, servants, and masters (3:18–4:1).
