The Harte & Garter Hotel

One of the most historical Windsor hotels, The Harte & Garter is an amalgamation of two 14th century inns; The Garter Inn, named after the Most Noble Order of the Garter, which was founded by King Edward III and The White Harte, named in honour of the Royal Emblem worn by King Richard II. In the late 19th Century they were joined together to form The Harte & Garter Hotel, a building in the Jacobean style, much loved by the Victorians and reflecting the Shakespearean connections.

AFTERNOON TEA

A Great British Tradition served 12.00 – 6.00pm

Tea, the Most Quintessential of English Drinks, is a relative latecomer to British shores. Although the customs of drinking tea dates back to the third millennium BC in China, it was not until the mid-17th century that tea first appeared.

Afternoon tea was introduced in England by Anna, the seventh Duchess of Bedford, in the year 1840. The Duchess would become hungry around 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The evening meal in the household was served fashionably late at eight o'clock, thus leaving a long period of time between lunch and dinner.

The Duchess asked that a tray of tea, bread and butter and a cake be brought to her room during the late afternoon. This became a habit and she began inviting her friends to join her. The pause for tea became a fashionable social event.

During the 1880's upper-class and Society women would change into long gowns, gloves and hats for their afternoon tea which was usually served in the drawing room between four and five o'clock.
