

An open letter on race and racism in Scotland

We, the signatories of this letter, represent a broad cross-section of Scotland's society. We are activists, community workers, academics and educators. Between us, we have many decades of experience in researching, teaching, studying and advocating for racial equality. We have differing experiences and, in some ways, differing views on race and racism.

However, following the negative and irresponsible media coverage of the Resisting whiteness conference held at Edinburgh University on 28th September 2019, we join together to express our shared concern that understandings of race and racism in Scotland are rolling backwards.

This incident is part of a broader trend that seeks to silence the voices of people in Scotland who face colour based racism.

Press articles on the Resisting whiteness conference included claims that the format of the event was 'blatantly racist'. The basis for this lies in an untrue assertion that white people would 'not be allowed to ask questions'. In fact, the organisers had made provision for white attendees to ask questions following the main question session. White attendees were informed of this in advance and the reasons were explained with balance, tact and sensitivity. This format was necessary to ensure that the discussion could be led by the voices of people affected by colour based racism.

The assertion that this was somehow racist directly undermines those voices, and appears potentially intended to drive division between people with an interest in anti-racism and the wider public.

The current climate of resentment towards frank discussion of race and racism threatens to undo progress on race equality in Scotland. This expands beyond attempts to police legitimate work to challenge racial inequality, into the policy making arena.

Within public sector work on race equality, we see a worrying trend towards limiting understanding of race to its basic legal definition. Everyone in Scotland is protected by law from racial discrimination on the grounds of their colour, nationality and ethnic or national origins, as is fair and just. However, it is blatantly unfair to suggest that the risk of inequality and discrimination on the grounds of race is equally applicable to everyone in Scotland.

Unfortunately, as with the false assertions aimed at the Resisting whiteness organisers, these views are sometimes put forward by people claiming to have anti-racist agendas. There is nothing anti-racist about minimising the link between colour based racism and racial inequality.

Evidence based policy approaches must take into account the history of racialisation and current experience of discrimination which creates worse outcomes for people from specific ethnic backgrounds in specific areas of life.

The solutions to these issues cannot be reached without open, honest discussion of how racism operates as a social and institutional structure, fuelled by the protections and advantages that people perceived as white have received over time and in the present day.

White people in Scotland have a vital role to play in creating the culture change needed to eradicate racism. However, just as there is a time for speaking out and challenging racism, there must be time for listening, learning and reflecting on the experiences of those who face racism. These discussions may be uncomfortable, but they are necessary.

These discussions need to recognise that whilst discrimination and xenophobia faced by white migrant groups must be tackled, for most of these groups, this will reduce over generations. The perception of whiteness will eventually confer an advantage; at the very least, the advantage of freedom from the impact of skin colour based stereotypes, prejudice and hatred.

Scotland has developed many national strategies, policies and initiatives looking at the disadvantage faced by those who experience racism and racial inequality. However, the lack of progress on race equality in practical terms shows that this is not enough.

Routine attempts to silence voices seeking to discuss race, and particularly to discuss whiteness, are holding us back.

We ask that those with influence – journalists, policy makers, politicians, educators and employers – seek to understand race and racism beyond simplistic legal definitions. We ask that this discussion makes space for listening, learning and reflecting on the realities of race and racism.

Only then can we claim to be a nation dedicated to tackling racial inequality.

Signed,

Aamer Anwar, Lawyer & Rector of the University of Glasgow

Adebusola Debora Ramsay

Adrian Lui

Andrea Baker Mezzo, Soprano, creator of Sing Sistah Sing!

Dr Andy Hancock, Moray House School of Education and Sport, University of Edinburgh

Anita Shelton

The Anti-Racist Educator

Benjamin Brown

Carol Young, Senior Policy Officer, CRER

Dr Chisomo Kalinga, University of Edinburgh

Dr Christine Whyte, Lecturer in Global History, University of Glasgow

Dr Claire Duncanson, School of Social and Political Science, University of Edinburgh

The Coalition for Racial Equality and Rights

Colin Clark, Professor of Sociology and Social Policy, University of the West of Scotland

Colin Lee, CEMVO Scotland

Davidson Chademana, Trade Union Equality Activist, UCU

Professor Diana Paton, University of Edinburgh

Eleanor McKnight, Learning & Development Manager, Elite Linguists

Dr Emma Hill, Sociology, University of Edinburgh

Emma Ritch, Executive Director, Engender

Farah Akbar, Co-Director of the Centre for Education for Racial Equality in Scotland

Fariha Thomas

Franklin Jacob, Black Students' Representative, NUS Scotland

Sir Geoff Palmer

Gillian Neish, Neish Training

Giulia Liberatore, University of Edinburgh

Councillor Graham Campbell, Glasgow City Council

Hannah Lavery

Hazel Gray, University of Edinburgh

Dr Ima Jackson, Glasgow Caledonian University

Jatin Haria, Executive Director, CRER

Jelina Berlow-Rahman, Berlow-Rahman Solicitors

Julia Davidson, Scotland Against Criminalising Communities

Julie Cupples, Professor of Human Geography and Cultural Studies, University of Edinburgh

Justine Atkinson, Festival Producer, Africa in Motion (AiM)

Dr Kanchana N Ruwanpura, Institute of Geography, University of Edinburgh

Kash Taank

Kaukab Stewart, SNP BAME Network Executive Member

Khaleda Noon and IYS Ambassadors, Intercultural Youth Scotland

Leyla De Amicis, UWS

Lisa Williams, Director, Edinburgh Caribbean Association

Lorraine Barrie, Manager, Glasgow Equality Forum

Lucinda Broadbent, Media co-Op

Dr Lucy Lowe, Social Anthropology, University of Edinburgh

Marlies Kustatscher, Centre for Education for Racial Equality in Scotland

Mélina Valdelièvre

Dr Meryl Kenny, Senior Lecturer in Gender and Politics, University of Edinburgh

Dr Mike Orr, Co-director, Centre for Education for Racial Equality in Scotland, Uni. of Edinburgh

Mohammed Razaq, Executive Director, WSREC

Najimee Parveen, Director, PATH Scotland

Naira Dar

Professor Nasar Meer, FAcSS, University of Edinburgh

Naseem Anwar

Nicola Frith, University of Edinburgh

Neil Davidson, School of Social and Political Science, University of Glasgow

Dr Nighet Riaz

Dr Órla Meadhbh Murray, University of Edinburgh

Pat Elsmie, Founding Director, Migrants' Rights Scotland

Dr Peggy Brunache, Lecturer in the History of Slavery, University of Glasgow

Professor Peter Hopkins, Newcastle University

Philomena de Lima

Dr Pontus Odmalm, University of Edinburgh

Rachel Douglas, University of Glasgow

Dr Radhika Govinda, Lecturer in Sociology, School of Social and Political Science, Uni. of Edinburgh

Rashne Limki, University of Edinburgh

Raza Sadiq, Active Life Club

Dr Rebecca Marsland, Senior Lecturer, Social Anthropology, University of Edinburgh

Resisting whiteness

Richard Haley, Scotland Against Criminalising Communities

Rohini Sharma Joshi

Rosa Murray, University of Edinburgh

Prof. Rowena Arshad, Chair in Multicultural and Anti-Racist Education, University of Edinburgh

Safia Ali, AMINA - Muslim Women's Resource Centre

Samuel Oludare Yerokun

Sanjay Lago, Performance Artist

Sekai Machache, Visual Artist

Shaben Begum, Director, SIAA

Shahzad Humayun, Chair, SCOREScotland

Show Racism the Red Card Scotland

Shruti Jain, Chair, Saheliya

SJ Cooper-Knock, Centre of African Studies and Social Anthropology, University of Edinburgh

Teresa Piacentini, University of Glasgow

Dr Tom Boylston, Department of Social Anthropology, University of Edinburgh

Dr Tom Cunningham, Research Fellow, History, Classics & Archaeology University of Edinburgh

Tommy Curry, University of Edinburgh

Tony Adams, Lecturer, City of Glasgow College

Trishna Singh, Sikh Sanjog

Zandra Yeaman, Coalition for Racial Equality and Rights

(all signatories in a personal capacity unless otherwise indicated)