on
"Paws for Life"
Prison Dog Program

From Who Rescued Whom? Shelter Dogs and Prison Inmates Give Each Other a New 'Leash' on Life, The Huffington Post, 09/03/14:

"Earlier this year, Karma Rescue, a nonprofit that saves at-risk dogs from high-kill shelters across Southern California, partnered with the California State Prison Los Angeles County in Lancaster to create "Paws for Life," a program that matches rescued dogs with inmates who train them to boost their odds of adoption. . . this is the first program in California to take place at a high-security prison with inmates serving life sentences."
