Mayor Errick D. Simmons Thanks Lowe's For Its Corporate Citizenship

City's Utility Art Box Project

GREENVILLE, Miss. (July 20, 2016) Mayor Errick D. Simmons issued a statement thanking Lowe's for its corporate citizenship in a City Utility Art Box Project.

Mayor Simmons states, "In collaboration with the City of Greenville and the Greenville Arts Council, Lowe's have agreed to donate 14 gallons of bonding primer (Valspar #46220), 3 gallons of each Sherwin Williams color requested for a total of 18 gallons, a pack of drop cloths, paint rollers and brushes, as well as volunteer time to prime 31 boxes. This is an awesome sign of corporate citizenship by Lowe's. I thank Store manager Joshua Blehm for this leadership and the Lowe's family for their commitment and service to the community."

Caroline Mansour, an intern for the Greenville Arts Council states, "The Greenville Arts Council is extremely grateful for the donation of supplies and volunteer hours from our local Lowe's. The Greenville Power Box Art initiative is an increasingly popular community project, and we are elated at the outpouring of support from across the Delta."

Joshua Blehm, store manager of Lowe's of Greenville states, "He is honored and excited to be a part of the utility box art project which will add beauty and culture to our city. Lowe's has proudly donated the paint materials needed to complete the project through their in store vendor partners Valspar and Sherwin Williams. The Greenville Lowe's team has also volunteered the man hours needed to prime the remaining 31 utility boxes and will begin work this Monday July the 25th.
